MRS. McCLUNG IS GIVEN POST

Noted Authoress Takes Practical Experience to National Task

Mrs. Nellie McClung, noted Canadian authoress, who lives at Gordon Head, near Victoria, will take to the board of governors of the new Canadian Broadcasting Corporation a wealth of practical experience on the programme side of radio work in Canada.

The appointment of Mrs. McClung to the board headed by Leonard W. Brockington, Winnipeg barrister, was announced from Ottawa last night by Prime Minister King.

As a radio speaker and also as the author of several dramatic presentations over the air in Canada, Mrs. McClung is acquainted with the working end of radio entertainment. Her latest book, "Clearing in the West," has been read over prairie stations, and several of her short stories have been dramatized in air versions.

Mrs. McClung said her appointment had come somewhat unexpectedly. She had a telegram from Prime Minister King advising her of the honor shortly before she had the advisory work.

"I am expecting instructions shortly," Mrs. McClung said. "As I understand it our duties will be to advise the management of the new corporation on the conduct of the radio system."

Mrs. McClung wired to Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Marine, last night formally accepting the appointment and expressing her appreciation of the honor.

"I am intensely interested in radio, and follow it closely, and realize its scope for good or evil," the writer said. She could see great possibilities for the new method of communication, and hoped she could do her part in building up a sane and useful system.

Mrs. McClung and Brigadier-General Victor W. Odlum of Vancouver are the only representatives on the board from far Western Canada.

Winnipeg Barrister Heads New Board Taking Charge November 2

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—Setting up of a new system of radio control for Canada will proceed following the appointment by the cabinet yesterday evening of the board of governors for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, to take office November 2.

Personnel of the board was announced by Prime Minister King as follows: Leonard W. Brockington, barrister, Winnipeg, to be chairman; René Morin, directeur-général du Trust Général du Canada, Montreal, to be vice-chairman; Brig.-General Victor W. Odlum, broker, Vancouver; J. Wilfrid Godfrey, barrister, Halifax; Professor A. Vachon, Laval University, Quebec; N. L. Ranthanson, president of Pamois Players' Corporation of Canada Ltd., Toronto; Colonel Wilfrid Bovey, barrister and educationalist, Montreal; Alan B. Plaut, journalist, Toronto, and Mrs. Nellie McClung, Canadian author, Victoria, B.C.

The new board of governors will recommend to the government its choice for general manager and assistant general manager. The appointments will be made before November 2, it is understood.

and the representative to be chosen by labor organizations.

For the one-year period the appointees are Donald H. McDougall, mining engineer of Stellarton, N.S., and Montreal, and Robert J. Moffatt, a prominent farmer of Bradwell, Sask., and director of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool.

REGIONAL COMMITTEES

The board will be asked to consider advisability of appointing regional advisory committees to co-operate with the directors in each of the Atlantic and western regions.

SALARIES SET

Mr. Hungerford, who worked his way up from apprentice mechanic to become president of the Canadian National system, and who will be chairman of the board, will receive a salary of $30,000 annually, while the directors each will receive $5,000. It was felt necessary, the Prime Minister said, to select the majority from points adjacent to the head office because of the likelihood of frequent meetings.

In permitting the railway workers themselves to nominate a member of the directorate, the Prime Minister said the government was taking a step he believed industry in general might well follow. This Mr. King said, would give a voice not only to those who invest their money in the system, but to those who invest their lives and their brains in the operation of the road.

MAY BE REAPPOINTED

In accordance with the act, and to provide continuity of the board, directors are appointed for three, two and one year terms, but all may be eligible for reappointment.

At the last session of Parliament an amendment was adopted to the Canadian National-Canadian Pacific Act of 1933 authorizing return to the board of director system of controlling the Canadian National. The 1933 legislation had abolished the board and appointed three trustees with wide powers who took over January 1, 1934.

COMPENSATION PLANNED

Former Judge C. P. Fullerton resigned his post as chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners to head the trustee board, and his associates were J. E. Labelle, K.C., Montreal, and P. E. Morrow, Toronto. It is understood some compensation will be provided for Mr. Fullerton and his associates who are to be retired.

LIVES IN TORONTO

James Y. Murdoch, K.C., president of Noranda Mines Limited, is a member of the law firm of Holden, Murdoch, Walton & Beatty, Toronto.

Wilfrid J. T. Gagnon, owner and operator of two shoe factories, in Montreal, was in that city September 15, 1936.

Herbert J. Symington, vice-president of the Royal Securities Corporation of Montreal, has been connected as general counsel with a large number of industrial and financial concerns, including the International Power Company.

D. H. McDougall, a former vice-president of the British Empire Steel Corporation, has been associated with numerous mining and industrial organizations throughout the Dominion, and is president of the McDougall Engineering Company and the McKinnon Steel Company.

Robert J. Moffatt is a prominent wheat grower and farmer of Bradwell, a director.

Proposal For Alliance in Popular Front Move Decisively Defeated at Trades Union Congress of United Kingdom

Canadian Press
Plymouth, Eng., Sept. 11.—The British Trades Union Congress today decisively rejected a proposal for an alliance with Communism in a Popular Front.

The congress had been asked to approve a united front of all those opposed to Fascism and war. The proposal came before the general assembly of the congress, which reported against it. The congress, meeting here, approved the report of the council with only a few dissenters.

The British trades unionists took their stand after an attack on Communism by Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary.

During his speech there was an exciting scene when Sir Walter pointed out that the correspondent for the Moscow newspaper Izvestia was sitting in the body of the hall among the delegates.

TOLD TO LEAVE

The congress was in an immediate uproar. "Get out" the delegates roared.

The chairman asked the correspondent to leave. The correspondent rose, surrounded by delegates shouting, "Get out." Then he walked to the side of the hall and returned to the press table, where he sat down.

"I imagine," Sir Walter said caustically, "that it is only an attempt to demonstrate the practical working of the United Front."

ORDERS FROM MOSCOW

Sir Walter denounced Communism as under marching orders from Moscow. Communists in Britain were a negligible quantity as a political party. They were abject failures, he said. Fascism was a remote danger in Britain as long as the trades unionists kept their heads.

He described the attempt of the Communist movement to ingratiate itself with organized labor as "one of the most amusing spectacles in contemporary political history."

Before the congress could set up an organizing department, he declared, the first step must be to get legislation to assure the workers they would not lose their jobs if they joined a union.

Fear of dismissal was handicapping organizers on every hand, he asserted. He was answering a suggestion of J. Salberg of Toronto that an active organizing department in the congress set out to organize all Canadian workers.

URGES LEGISLATION

During the forenoon session's discussion Mr. Draper told the congress fear of dismissal was keeping many workers from joining labor unions.

Before the congress could set up an organizing department, he declared, the first step must be to get legislation to assure the workers they would not lose their jobs if they joined a union.

FIVE KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

Fears Expressed Other Transients Lost Lives in Missouri

Associated Press
St. Charles, Mo., Sept. 11.—At least five men were killed when eighteen freight and oil cars of an M-K-T train were derailed and destroyed by fire last night twenty miles southwest of here, and rescuers expressed fear today several other transients may have been killed.

A transient, found immediately after the wreck, said before he died he was Walter Bragg, thirty-six, of Columbus, O.

The other four bodies were found on the tracks several hours after the accident had occurred. Intense heat of the burning cars had prevented a search before that time. Two of the bodies were burned beyond recognition, but it might be possible to identify the other two, railroad employees said.

AUTO RECORD ATTEMPT MADE

John Cobb of England Seeks 24-hour Marks on Utah Salt Flats

Associated Press
Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Sept. 11.—John Cobb of England started a projected twenty-four-hour dash against time in his racing automobile at 7:25 a.m. P.M.T. today.

The ruddy-faced Englishman, who set four new world marks in a one-hour dash Wednesday, pointed chiefly today toward the twenty-four-hour record of an average of 149.58 miles an hour held by his countryman, Capt. George Eyston.

The Briton failed by a split second—39.100 was the exact fraction—in his attempt to break Utah's Ab Jenkins' world record of 161.58 miles an hour for 200 miles. He appeared to be pushing harder after he had passed that mark.

He had said before his takeoff he was hoping of bagging "all intermediate records" now distributed among Eyston, Ab Jenkins, and German and French drivers.

"We shall have a try for the twenty-four hour record," Cobb said with a confident tone as he climbed into the streamlined Napier-Railton that carried him to short-lived records on the flats a year ago.

"I also would very much like to have all the intermediate records," he said.

RELIEF DRIVERS

Three relief drivers—Tim Rose-Richards, Charles Brackenbury and John Hindmarsh—will be named to help Cobb during the grueling drive over the white salt.

Cobb, a London tire broker, is using the same car this year that he used last summer when he averaged 134 miles an hour for twenty-four hours.

DRAPER AGAIN IS LABOR HEAD

Re-elected President of Trades Congress of Canada at Montreal

Canadian Press
Montreal, Sept. 11.—F. M. Draper of Ottawa was re-elected president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada today by unanimous vote.

The only other nomination offered was that of Joseph Corbett of London, Ont., but he declined to stand and Mr. Draper was given his second term by acclamation.

R. J. Talbot of Montreal was also re-elected secretary-treasurer by acclamation.

URGES LEGISLATION

During the forenoon session's discussion Mr. Draper told the congress fear of dismissal was keeping many workers from joining labor unions.

Before the congress could set up an organizing department, he declared, the first step must be to get legislation to assure the workers they would not lose their jobs if they joined a union.

Italy Expels U.S. Correspondent

Order Given H. Gorrell, United Press Bureau Head at Rome; He Appeals

Rome, Sept. 11.—The Italian government today handed Henry Gorrell, acting chief of bureau of the United Press in Rome, a written order of expulsion.

The order was the result of a story which said Gorrell had been made managing director of the Sashitzewan Wheat Pool, of which he is still a director.

Burgos, Spain, Sept. 11.—With the forging of the last link by Gen. Francisco Franco's legionnaires and Gen. Emilio Mola's cavalry, the insurgent junta today claimed that its semicircular chain of steel tightening on Madrid from the north, west and south had been completed.

The capture earlier this week of Arenas de San Pedro by Mola and regulars established the strategic link between the two forces required for the offensive on the capital, headquarters announced.

The liaison between the two forces was effected at the village of Parra after government troops deformed the village had fled in complete disorder.

SAY ATTACK REPLIED

Gen. Franco said a strong attack by government supporters on the Talavera front had been repulsed with heavy losses, one Madrid column alone leaving 250 dead on the field.

New government attempts to storm Oviedo likewise had been repulsed, it was said.

Insurgent planes launched a heavy bombardment against Trubia and La Felguera industrial towns in central Spain, the insurgent command announced.

It was announced here that four children had been killed by bombs dropped on a school at Arenas de San Pedro by government bombing planes.

BACK TO MAINLAND

Dispatches from Palma de Mallorca said the government column which landed on the island from Valencia had been repulsed and that 4,000 of the 5,000 troops in the column had returned to the mainland suffering from hunger and exposure.

The Junta's military press bureau warned all foreign correspondents' last night they would be expelled from the country unless their newspapers hereafter referred to anti-Madrid troops as "Nationals" instead of "Rebels," and to Madrid troops as "governmentals" instead of "loyalists."

By ROBERT B. PARKER JR.
Associated Press Correspondent
San Sebastian, Spain, Sept. 11.—Spanish insurgents renewed their military advance on San Sebastian today as pillaging broke out anew inside the besieged resort city.

The booming of Fascist cannon and the whistle of shells along Socialist-defended frontiers signalled the end of a forty-eight-hour unofficial armistice.

Gorrell applied to the United States embassy, which obtained a twenty-four-hour stay in the expulsion order. The United States Press Bureau was appealing to the government to revoke the order.

On September 8, the Associated Press learned that some twenty persons had been arrested at Terni following the discovery of pamphlets considered subversive on the walls of munitions factory restrooms. There was no indication any of those held were connected with the Fascist Party.

Lisbon Tells Of Red Fleet Plan

Havas News Agency

Lisbon, Sept. 11.—Charges Portuguese seamen planned to form an international fleet flying the red flag of world revolution were made by Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar here today.

The premier announced the two warships which attempted to leave Portugal earlier this week intended to join with ships of other nations to create an international mobile red fighting fleet whose first job would be to aid the Spanish government.

Premier Salazar issued a flat warning to the men of the Portuguese fleet: "Surrender or be sunk." This would be the alternative offered to any group of sailors who try another mutiny, he said.

CONTRACT IN QUEBEC ENDED

Quebec, Sept. 11 (Canadian Press)—Abolition of Le Journal d'Agriculture as a saving of $100,000 a year, and cancellation of a contract between the former Liberal government and Signs of Canada Limited for manufacture of motor license plates were announced today by Premier Duplessis.

The Premier said an inquiry "revealed that in 1935, two years before the motor license contract, then existing, expired, the former government, following its policy of granting contracts to favorites of the administration, entered into another contract for the years 1935, 1937 and 1938."

The contract with the company, headed by Oscar Beriaud, former director of domestic arts for the province, was signed by R. F. Stockwell, former Provincial Treasurer.

Shanghai, Sept. 11.—Four Japanese fighting vessels—three destroyers and one cruiser—arrived at Shanghai today from Tientsin en route to Hongkong to guard Japanese interests in south China.

Canada Bars Mrs. Hauptmann

Associated Press

Rouses Point, N.Y., Sept. 11.—Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, barred yesterday from Canada because she could not prove United States citizenship, looked to the Dominion Government today to overturn immigration inspectors and allow her to continue to Montreal.

Inspector Emil Levin of the United States immigration service, who questioned Mrs. Hauptmann and a companion on their return from an unsuccessful effort to gain admission to Canada at Quebec, expressed belief the widow of the executed kidnaper-murderer of the Lindbergh baby was "staying somewhere in the vicinity of Montreal," pending action on her appeal.

Levin explained an appeal against expulsion from Canada is automatically filed at Ottawa, and a decision usually is given within seventy-two hours.

Mrs. Hauptmann's companion, who said he was her attorney but did not otherwise identify himself, told Canadian officials the widow of the Bronx carpenter was on the way to Montreal to check information on the Lindbergh kidnapping. He said she was still trying to prove Bruno Richard Hauptmann innocent of the crime for which he was put to death last April 8.

Ottawa, Sept. 11 (Canadian Press)—Refusal of immigration officials at Canby, Que., to permit Mrs. Anna Hauptmann to enter Canada, had nothing to do with the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the kidnapping-slaying of the Lindbergh baby, officials of the department here said today.

Departmental officials here said no report on the border incident had been received here, but they understood Mrs. Hauptmann was on her way to Montreal to obtain a visa from the United States consulate-general there. The visa would enable her to remain in the United States.

It was understood here the reason the widow of the Bronx carpenter was turned back was her inability to produce evidence of United States citizenship. Without it, if she came into Canada, Washington could refuse to readmit her and Canada would be forced to let her remain here, or deport her to Germany.

Italy To Share In League Sessions

Plans to Collaborate With Powers If Ethiopian Issue
Not Raised to Embarrass
Her

Associated Press
Rome, Sept. 11.—Italy will resume collaboration in League of Nations affairs, provided the Ethiopian issue is not raised to embarrass her, informed sources reported today.

The agreement was reached, these sources declared, during conferences between Premier Mussolini and Joseph A. C. Avenol, secretary-general of the League.

The Italian Premier was reported as agreeing to forego insistence that Ethiopia cancel its membership in the League. He was represented as believing such a step is not necessary at this time although he sees the Ethiopian withdrawal as an eventual necessity.

At the same time, it was believed to have made it clear Italy could not be expected to participate in deliberations with either the Negus or his delegate present at Geneva sessions.

The Italian delegation to Geneva withdrew last June after Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia had appeared to defend his demand that the League punish Italy for aggression in East Africa.

Better Brains In Evolution

Hopes Voiced By Prof. Julian
Huxley at British Science
Session

By SCIENCE SERVICE
Blackpool, Eng., Sept. 11.—High hopes that the human brain can be greatly improved by planned evolution, even so far that telepathy and other extrasensory activities of the mind are as commonly distributed as musical and mathematical gifts today, were expressed by Prof. Julian Huxley, leading British biologist and head of the London Zoological Gardens, in his presidential address before the zoology section of the British Association for the Advancement of Science here yesterday.

The main part of any large change in man's biologically determined must be sought in the improvement of the brain, Prof. Huxley declared. Conscious and conceptual thought is the latest step in life's progress, and in the perspective of evolution a very recent one. Prof. Huxley believes that its main effects are indubitably still to come.

RAISING OF LEVEL
"There are many obvious ways in which the brain's level of performance could be raised," he said. "If for all the main attributes of mind the average of a population could be raised to the level now attained by the best-endowed 10,000th, or even 1,000th, that alone would be of far-reaching evolutionary significance. Nor is there any reason to suppose that such quantitative increase could not be pushed beyond its present upper limits."

"There are other faculties, the bare existence of which is as yet scarcely established. Those, too, might be developed until they were as commonly distributed as, say, musical or mathematical gifts are today. I refer to telepathy and other extrasensory activities of mind, which the work of Rhine, Salter and others is now forcing into scientific recognition."

Man is not to follow the lead of the social insects, like ants and bees, in developing altruistic instincts such as they display, Prof. Huxley believes that it is impossible so long as the human species continues in its present reproductive habits.

But if the dream of some biologists of "test-tube babies" were realized it might be different.

NEW POSSIBILITIES
"If we were to adopt some system for using the gametes of a few highly-endowed individuals, directly or from tissue cultures, to produce all the next generation, then all kinds of new possibilities would emerge," Prof. Huxley said. "Man might develop castes, and some at least of them might be endowed with altruistic and communal impulses."

Prof. Huxley repudiated guidance of life by some external power, or the idea of a purpose in evolution. He considered "wholly false" the idea that people can trust some external power for further guidance in the future.

"Any purpose we find manifested in evolution is only an apparent purpose," he said. "It is we who have read purpose into evolution, as earlier men projected God and emotion into inorganic phenomena, like storms or earthquakes. If we wish to work towards a purpose for the future of man, we must formulate that purpose ourselves. Purposes in life are made, not found."

Prof. Huxley is a grandson of the famous evolutionist, Thomas Henry Huxley, and the brother of Aldous Huxley, the novelist.

COMMUNISM DENOUNCED
Toronto, Sept. 11.—(Canadian Press)—Archbishop McGuigan has issued a pastoral letter against Communism and calling the Roman Catholics of the archdiocese of Toronto to a "holy crusade of prayer." The letter warns against the "virus of Communism" being spread in our midst.

NEW ALBERTA TRADE OFFICES

Government Discusses Establishments in Other Provinces

Canadian Press
Edmonton, Sept. 11.—The Alberta government has discussed extensively the establishment of "outside" trade offices for the distribution and exchange of goods, but plans have not reached the stage where erection of warehouses is intended, according to Hon. E. C. Manning, Minister of Trade and Industry.

The minister had been asked if the government intended opening warehouses and going into the wholesale business, leading to possible elimination of the need of wholesalers in the province.

"The trend at present is toward buying direct from the manufacturers," Mr. Manning declared. "While it is necessary to provide the people with goods, the government is not thinking of setting up a competitive system."

"Our field would be to arrange for purchase of goods direct from the manufacturers, but distribution would be up to the merchants."

N. J. Tall of Medicine Hat, Alta., has been appointed a trade commissioner for the province and he will open an office in Montreal soon. Reports said similar trade offices might be opened in Winnipeg and Vancouver. Premier Abernethy has said the government might arrange with British co-operatives for exchange of goods.

CODE FOR WHOLESALERS
Canadian Press
Edmonton, Sept. 11.—A master code to regulate operations of Alberta wholesalers, mainly covering business ethics, was approved here yesterday when a delegation of wholesalers from Edmonton and Calgary conferred with Hon. E. C. Manning, Minister of Trade and Industry.

Chief provision of the code is that wholesalers shall not sell to ultimate consumers except in special instances. Mr. Manning said further legislation was not required to put the code into effect. No provisions were made for dealing with prices.

FELLOWSHIPS OF $2,500 EACH

By Science Service
Wilmington, Del., Sept. 11.—The Lator Foundation will grant five fellowships valued at $2,500 each in chemistry and related sciences for the academic year 1937-38. It was announced here yesterday by C. Lator Burdick, Foundation secretary.

The awards may be used for research anywhere in the United States or abroad.

The only restriction of the fellowships is that at least one, each year, goes to a research fellow assigned to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology since the foundation is a memorial to the late Dr. Arthur A. Noyes, founder of the physical chemistry laboratory of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Appointments will be open to both men and women, including professors on sabbatical leave, the secretary of the Lator Foundation stated. The closing date for applications will be December 1, 1936.

Edmonton Man
Wrote to the King

Canadian Press
Edmonton, Sept. 11.—Fred Surry, Edmonton book merchant, who wrote King Edward VIII asking that the Alberta government be prevented from circulating "Prosperity Certificates," received an answer to the letter yesterday.

The reply, signed by an official of the British secretary of state department, informed Mr. Surry his communication had been referred to the Governor-General of Canada.

Mr. Surry, founder of the League of Freedom for persons who objected to signing covenants under the provincial government's registration for basic dividends, addressed his letter directly to His Majesty.

Blinding Headaches Made Her Helpless

Forced to Lie Down for Hours at a Time

Other sufferers from headaches will be interested to read this letter:
"Until last summer I was subject to very bad headaches. While they lasted I seemed to lose my sight and all power in my hands, and was forced to lie down for hours at a time. My aunt (who has taken me to the hospital for 12 years with beneficial results) suggested my trying them. I did so, and I've not had any return of those headaches for months. In fact I feel quite better. I shall always take Kruschen regularly in future."
"Headaches can frequently be traced to a disordered stomach, and to the unassisted retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in the complete elimination of waste matter, resulting in a purer blood-stream, and thus helping to bring relief from headaches."

Labor Votes For Spain Loyalists

Convention of Trades and Labor Congress of Canada
Voices Support

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, Sept. 11.—Support for Spain's left-wing government and hope for an early and victorious finish to its fight with the Rightist rebels was unanimously voted yesterday by the annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. Without debate and in the space of a minute the delegates, representing labor unions in all parts of Canada, put themselves on record as declaring the rebellion was against the best interests of the working classes and a violation of the true spirit of democracy.

The resolution of sympathy with the Spanish government was brought in by John Bruce of Toronto.

APPRECIATION VOICED
The concluding words of the resolution are:

"Be it resolved that this congress wishes to express to the workers of Spain our appreciation of their splendid fight in defence of their liberties, and especially of their democratic institutions and government, constitutionally elected."

"And be it further resolved that this congress pledges itself further on record in the interests of international solidarity as expressing to the Spanish workers our sincere interest in their fight for justice, freedom and peace, and our hopes for an early and victorious finish."

Earlier in the day Walter Schevenels, secretary of the International Federation of Trade Unions, had told the delegates of labor conditions in Europe, and said he was confident the Spanish rebellion would not succeed.

The hymns "Oh Love That Will Not Let Me Go" and "Abide With Me" were sung by the congregation. Acting as pallbearers were: H. Waring, G. Dunbar, W. Beck and Walter Tuttle.

New Advertising For Canada

Big Campaign to Be Carried Out in Britain Described
By Massey

Canadian Press
Toronto, Sept. 11.—A campaign of advertising Canada, termed by experts "the most concentrated and scientifically directed regional campaign yet launched by a Dominion," will be opened this fall in Great Britain, the Toronto Canadian Club was told yesterday by Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London.

The programme will start in October in the Glasgow area and will continue there four months, to be followed by a similar effort in each of the great centres of population in the British Isles. "Under the slogan 'Canada Calling,' an appeal will be made to British wholesalers, retailers and consumers to buy Canadian foodstuffs of all kinds," the High Commissioner said. "Information will be given shortly to Canadian exporters regarding this campaign and his cooperation invited."

"Canadian visitors are conscious of the dearth of Canadian news in the metropolitan and provincial press of Great Britain," said Mr. Massey. "This problem alone calls for very careful study. Through the press, through films, through spoken words, exhibitions, through a dozen different media, it should be possible to make Canada better known in England."

Mr. Massey reported what he termed a "time-lag" in Great Britain in the popular idea of Canada. "Over there we are still thought of very frequently as a land of wide-open spaces given chiefly to agricultural pursuits." Too little was known of the industrial development which had placed the Dominion among the first ten industrial nations of the world, though agriculture remained the "foundation of our economic life," he said.

Death Sentence At Los Angeles

Associated Press
Los Angeles, Sept. 11.—Without any outward sign of reaction, Robert S. Jones, red-haired, green-eyed master barber, yesterday heard himself sentenced to be hanged for killing his seventh wife by drowning after causing a rattlesnake to bite her foot. Judge Charles Priddy denied a motion for a new trial and doomed James to die "at some future time." If set no date because of the new California law which provides automatic appeal of all death penalty cases to the state Supreme Court.

Seventy-five Years Old

the Provincial Exhibition—known as Victoria's Fall Fair—will be opened and will celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary. As this is written there are indications that the entry of exhibits will be far ahead of last year and set an all-time record.

This is as it should be. This annual event is the one fine opportunity for Victoria and the immediate neighborhood to show what they produce—from the farm, the factory, and from the home, for there are in this city many domestic industries of which little is known. The Fall Fair brings them into full view.

It has been asked many times what this annual event means to the southern end of Vancouver Island. It might take a John Hart, a Graham Towers, a Charlie Dunning, or a Montague Norman to answer the question as it relates to dollars and cents. What the average citizen of Victoria understands about it, however, is that it tells the world what can be done in the way of production under innumerable heads—in this part of Canada.

Our advice to our citizens is that they go out to the Willows tomorrow, and every day next week, to get an idea of what their community can do in the way of production. Let the fact sink in that every dollar spent on locally-produced commodities is a dollar put into the pockets of our own taxpayers.

The most violent objectors to increases in taxation are those who do not try to figure out what they might save in the long run by buying the local product. The Fall Fair should be an object lesson in economics to them.

A Capable Executive

PREMIER MACKENZIE KING HAS made no mistake in confirming Mr. S. J. Hungerford in his position as chairman of the Canadian National Railways. The successor of the late Sir Henry Thornton knows his business. He began as an apprentice mechanic and has plodded his way up to the top of the railway ladder. Those who for years have worked with him, no matter in what capacity they have served the C.N.R., speak highly of his intimate knowledge of transportation in all its branches.

The Canadian National Railways has been much maligned by the apostles of special privilege. As a transportation system, it has been compelled to labor under a top-heavy capitalization structure. It has been the target for interests which consider that only a private form of administration can be successful economically. The C.N.R. has to carry the burden of watered stock which puts the system in the red each year. One of these days, of course, there will be a readjustment of the people's railway on sound economic lines. Meanwhile, however, the people of Canada will be well served by Mr. Hungerford and his colleagues on the newly-constituted board.

Mathematical Uncertainty

FOR THOSE WHO LIKE MATHEMATICS problems, here is one which was given to the learned American Mathematical Society meeting in connection with the Tercentenary celebration of Harvard University by the noted British mathematician, Ronald Aylmer Fisher, professor of eugenics at the University of London.

"The agricultural land of a pre-dynastic Egyptian village is of unequal fertility. Given the height to which the Nile will rise, the fertility of every portion of it is known with exactitude, but the height of the flood affects different parts of the territory unequally. It is required to divide the area, between the several households of the village, so that the yields of the lots assigned to each shall be in predetermined proportions, whatever may be the height to which the river rises."

If mathematicians can solve this problem, said Dr. Fisher, one of the primary problems of what is called mathematically "uncertain inference" will be solved.

Dr. Fisher's invited paper dealt with the history and role of uncertain inference in mathematics. The field is one in which mathematical reason is applied to uncertainties, yet applied with logical rigor. The problem is one which is being increasingly met in science where it is necessary to take observation data with all their imperfections, their paucity in number and imperfect precision, and yet draw inference from them which the observations warrant.

Lack of this method of uncertain inference, the British mathematician pointed out, is the basis for the old phrase, "anything can be proved by statistics."

Strong Man Rulers

ONE OF THESE DAYS IT IS POSSIBLE as long-suffering human race may decide it has been kept up long enough. If it should come to that decision it will perform the mass equivalent of letting its hair down and putting its feet up on the porch railing, and at that point the assorted dictators, strong men, and rabble-rousers of the present era will begin looking for new jobs.

The world as a whole has been living on its emotions for years. It has been keyed up, grated at, harangued, ordered about, and generally bedeviled in a way fit to drive its people to asylums by battalions. But the race cannot keep on that way any more than an individual can. Sooner or later there is bound to be a letdown.

For instance, we have Benito Mussolini addressing the people of Italy in fine, impassioned phrases:

"We must be strong! We must be always stronger! . . . To this supreme, categorical principle must be subordinated and will be subordinated all the life of the nation."

This sounds stirring. It is the sort of thing that, addressed directly to a man by someone admired and respected, makes him want to hammer his chest and turn on the man who fails to respond to it.

But men cannot go on feeling that way indefinitely. There comes a time when such appeals begin to be a trifle boring. They feel they have heard it all before, and that getting noble and tense is just a bit of a nuisance when they have to do it too often. Then, the next time the strong man approaches and bids them be strong and vigilant, they are more than likely to yawn and go out in the garden and weed the young onions.

The point is that it is only by such emotional appeals the dictators and the demagogues keep themselves in power. They live on the emotions of their followers. As long as they can keep on whipping up the fears, hatreds, suspicions, and unfulfilled aspirations of the mass, they are safe; the moment the whip stops swishing, they are done for.

The Italians, the Germans, the Russians, and the others—they have been under the lash for a good many years. Periodically, each group is called on to face some "crisis" or other—to assert its heroism, to live dangerously, to be violent and brave and self-denying.

On of these days they are likely to decide that they have had enough. They will greet their leaders' frenzied appeals with, "Do we have to go through all that again?" They will act, in other words, as people always have acted when the tension has been kept up too long.

When that day comes, the beetle-browed strong men, the voice-cracking orators, the men of destiny in general, will be hunting for a new line of work.

One in Every Twelve

ONE IN EVERY TWELVE BOYS meets with a traffic accident during his school life in London. Lieut.-Col. J. A. A. Pickard, general secretary of the National "Safety First" Association, publishes this grim fact in an appeal to parents and motorists. During the last ten years, he reports, 14,000 children under fifteen have been killed and 400,000 injured on the roads of Great Britain.

In all, there have been fifty-nine fewer deaths this year, according to a talk broadcast by Mr. Hore-Belisha, Minister of Transport, although 2,500 more people have been injured. None of the increased number have been pedestrians; 800 fewer have been killed this year so far. Motorists and bicyclists have suffered more in proportion.

Of course, the enormous increase of cars on the road must be taken into account with these figures, but this only increases the danger to the general public. With the rapid increase of motor traffic in England, more and more stringent driving tests are urged as a means of doing something, although even this cannot eliminate errors of judgment due to inexperience and lack of practice.

Setting An Example

THE RUST BROTHERS OF MEMPHIS, Tenn., have been testing their new mechanical cotton picker, which is, apparently, a success. But, because it seems to be a success, its inventors are worried.

They have invented a machine which, if widely adopted, might displace 75 per cent of laborers who now earn livings by cotton production. This is what troubles the Rust brothers.

Accordingly, their machine is not for sale. It can be leased, but only on terms that include a prescribed minimum wage, abolition of child labor, and maximum hours of labor.

Would that all modern inventors might adopt the same humanitarian outlook!

Notes

The less a man knows, the greater his delight when he catches somebody else in an error.

To get the percentage of idle people in any community, count the number of scandalous false rumors.

The people of Seattle, as The New Yorker remarks, are trying to prove that it is possible for a big city to exist without a Hearst newspaper.

From what we hear over the radio, the election campaign in United States is giving the best possible evidence that good old-fashioned American freedom of speech and press is still doing nicely, thank you.

The tragedy-stricken trail of the drunken driver covers the highways of many parts of the continent, according to the dispatches we read in the newspapers. It not only menaces all who drive automobiles, but also anyone who crosses a street, or walks along a sidewalk, or waits for a stop light. Believing that one way to combat this scourge is to develop public opinion against the inebriate driver, The Cleveland Press prints details of the worst traffic fatalities across page one. It photographs the driver, if he is still alive; the victim; the victim's family; and, occasionally, the bar where the driver admitted he got "a couple of beers and a shot." If this stirs enough public sentiment to outlaw the intoxicated driver, it will have achieved a great goal.

LOOSE ENDS

Sacrilege is committed in regard to rum—General Wolfe wasn't killed in action after all—Dr. Nishi stops wriggling like a gold fish—And a lady has a thrill.

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

SACRILEGE

A FRIEND OF MINE, who drinks rum, came to me the other day to lodge a strong protest against things as they are. His complaint, which should be carefully considered by the authorities, was about as follows: "Look here, is there nothing sacred left in the world? See this! (He flourished an advertisement for gin which showed a bottle of the stuff against a superb background of Rocky Mountains, glaciers and forests). Imagine using our country, our scenery, for such purposes as that! As if anyone ever took gin into the woods with him! You take rum, of course. Can you imagine anyone sitting around the camp fire on a chilly September night sipping gin? Oh, God! But there is worse."

"Look at this," (He produced an advertisement for rum which showed a beautiful young lady in an evening dress, cut very low, and a slick youth, with shiny hair, drinking cocktails. This said my friend, "is what rum has come to! It is bad enough to use our scenery to advertise gin, but imagine taking good honest rum and putting it in a background like that, among flappers and lounge lizards! The thing is positively immoral. I ask you again, is nothing sacred any more, not even rum?" "No," I said, "nothing is sacred any more; not even rum."

DEATH OF WOLFE

IT IS REALLY SURPRISING, when you come to consider it, what progress science has been making in the last few years. Its latest useful discovery is that General Wolfe did not die from wounds on the Field of Abraham, though he may have been wounded. He died of tuberculosis, much less gloriously than we had been led to believe.

How gratifying it is to know that skilled scientists are spending their time finding out these vital facts and publishing them to a popular world. That is not all. The scientists have been going into the private affairs of most of the leading men of history and discovering how they died. The record is jolly, if you have a strong stomach.

Thus Christopher Columbus, Henry VIII and various other heroes are found to have died from various not generally considered respectable nowadays. I could name you a lot more, but I fear it might make you feel sick.

In the next few years, no doubt, the most private anatomical and biological facts of all great men's lives will be dredged up and published to the world for its edification. Apparently nothing is private and, like rum, nothing sacred.

If this goes on much longer, if men like Wolfe are to be debunked by science, there will be no glory of Canadian history goes out like a candle when you are told that General Wolfe won Canada for the empire but expired outside Quebec from lung trouble. How are you going to keep up the traditions of our race if it is discovered that its greatest heroes were not killed gloriously by arrows and bullets, but were conquered, like you or me, by ordinary disease germs.

THANKS, DOCTOR

DR. KATSUZO NISHI is my ideal of a real medical adviser. He landed in San Francisco from Japan recently to announce that anybody can live to be 240 years old if he merely follows a few simple rules of health, including the practice of sleeping on a hard bed with a metal pillow and "wriggling like a gold fish."

Dr. Nishi only started wriggling like a gold fish in middle-age so he hardly expects to live beyond 150 years of age. But his course of wriggling is so effective, he says, that one need not keep on following it indefinitely. Once you have wriggled yourself into a sufficient state of good health you can give it up. By way of example, Dr. Nishi no longer finds it necessary to practice what he preaches at all. He doesn't wriggle any more.

This is precisely the kind of health exercise that the world has been waiting for so long—one which requires no exercise. Nearly all men in middle-age have followed Dr. Nishi's practice of doing nothing about their health for a long time, but so far they haven't lived for 240 years. So long as Dr. Nishi's system doesn't involve sleeping in a hard bed with a metal pillow or wriggling like a gold fish, or doing anything else, you may be sure it will be widely followed in America.

THRILL

ONE WOULD BE CALLED A CAD, I suppose, if he did anything but gush about the recent feat of an English mother in flying across the Atlantic alone. No one, I dare say, will be excused for saying that the gushing which has proceeded all over the world, and particularly in the newspapers, is all rather absurd.

So was the flight itself. It served no scientific purpose. It accomplished nothing but a thrill for the thrifty and a whole lot of gushing publicity. And onshore was the lady's child, seven years old, and her husband who, apparently, were not taken into consideration at all. If a lady without a husband or child wants to dive into the Atlantic, it is nobody's business, but if husbands and children can't stop mothers from rushing off and flying oceans alone, with a good chance of drowning themselves, what is going to happen to our society?

The thrill, however, was a symptom of an age—an age which lives not by bread alone but mostly by thrills and excitement. Historians and psychologists will be interested in such adventures by mothers of children later on. They will say that this age was quite mad and that when mothers started hopping the Atlantic, anybody with any sense could see that the disintegration of our civilization had already set in. Anybody could see it except the people who were living through the whole thing and who got their thrill vicariously, like the Romans watching gladiators fighting to the death, by watching matrons fly the ocean while their children waited at home, not knowing whether they were going to have a mother the next morning or not.

Women should be allowed to fly the Atlantic if they want to, or the North Pole, for that matter, or to blow out their brains, if any, because the state is not concerned. But they shouldn't be allowed to do it if they have children, for with children the state is vitally concerned. They are the state's only real asset for the future, and if women will have them they should deny themselves some of the luxuries of life, including airplane hops across the ocean.

NOT FOREIGNERS

I have never heard a Canadian refer to an American as a "foreigner." He is just an "American." And in the same way, in the United States, Canadians are not "foreigners," they are "Canadians." That simple little distinction illustrates to me better than anything else the relationship between our two countries. Franklin D. Roosevelt, on his recent Canadian trip.

Flats For Workers

From a London Correspondent

London's Hammersmith Housing Committee has approved rebuilding plans at an estimated capital cost of £146,982. There will be fourteen blocks of flats at low rentals providing accommodation for 1,342 working people.

Housing authorities are beginning—too slowly, perhaps—to act as a check on speculative building. Building is a sphere where individual enterprise has proved that it cannot be trusted. The harm that speculative building has done—as, for instance, in "ribbon development"—may take years of disinterested planning to undo. The only comforting feature is that the revolting neo-Tudor boxes have generally been built with such thin walls and rotten materials that they cannot last long. "I'll huff and I'll puff . . ."

The Hammersmith flats are all to be lighted with electricity and each is to have a living-room, scullery and bathroom besides the bedrooms. This is the minimum and does not sound very impressive, but compared with some London dwelling houses, these flats will merit the house-agent's adjective "luxury." For provision has been made for a coal fire in the living-room, a gas copper in the scullery, bedrooms may be heated with gas or electricity, and for cooking there is the same choice.

Hot water-heated drying rooms for the tenants' washing will be provided at the rear of the four-story blocks.

FIVE AND A HALF CENTS PER MEAL

From the Toronto Daily Star

A contemporary says that "the taxpayers are unable, and should not be asked, to make relief an attractive cushion on which to linger indefinitely," and adds that "expenditures which go to furnish supplies beyond needs must be withheld."

The inference would seem to be that perhaps too much relief is being given in Toronto; not only too much relief to those who are not entitled to it, but too much to those who are really dependent upon the city for their livelihood. Certainly the former—those fraudulently on relief—should be eliminated from the list, and if that duty is to any extent being neglected, it is an unfortunate thing for the taxpayers. But for the genuine and worthy claimants upon public welfare, is the city's previous really too large? Are they being fed, for example, beyond their reasonable needs?

The fact is that the food furnished by the city for a family of five—two adults and three children—works out at less than 5¢ cents per person per meal. It is per week, as follows:

Voucher for groceries	$1.80
Voucher for meat	.45
Voucher for vegetables	.40
Voucher for butter	.45
Voucher for bread	1.08
Voucher for milk	1.51
Total	$5.69

When the family of five sits down to its 27-cent meal—27 cents for all, not for each—when it manages to exist on 9¢ cents worth of meat per person per week, is it really enjoying food "beyond its needs"? Surely not.

It is true that even such provisions for relief as this schedule indicates are a heavy burden upon the taxpayer. But the load is beginning to lift. Relief recipients in Toronto are 21 per cent fewer than a year ago, and while the cost has not decreased to quite the same extent, because of increased shelter allowance, it is now definitely upon the downward path.

OPEN-AIR THEATRE

From a London Correspondent

The 1936 season of the Open-air Theatre in Regent's Park, London, was accorded "sufficient backing." More than 6,000 subscriptions totaling £2,500 received in response to Sydney Carroll's appeal.

Money came from all over Britain, from visitors from the Dominions and foreign countries, stage actresses, and even from a film corporation!

Rain was Mr. Carroll's chief enemy. Nobody who goes to an open-air theatre likes to see the play in a stuffy tent with the rain pattering on the canvas and drowning the actors' voices. What is worse—from the manager's point of view—is that many people are deterred from going at all when there are threatening clouds in the sky.

Shakespeare is the most popular playwright with the open-air Theatre's public. His plays actually make money—unlike Bernard Shaw's, which do not. Mr. Shaw would probably say that if his plays had been written 300 years ago crowds would flock to see them.

Ballets are not very successful, either. I do not think a natural setting suits them; they seem to need the artificiality and lighting of the theatre. There is something too incongruous about bare feet executing intricate choreography on the dirty grass of Regent's Park.

Letters to The Editor

CHALLENGES MR. GIBSON ON SPAIN

To the Editor:—May I protest against some of the gross inaccuracies of Mr. William C. Gibson's article on Spain. I consider it to be a direct challenge to any and every person who believes in the Christian religion.

Admitting that he had not obtained a telescopic view of what was going on in Spain, Mr. Gibson parrots the mouthings of the propagandists of the Communist Popular Front government of Madrid. Surely the writer of the article does not expect anyone (however ignorant he may consider his readers to be) to believe that the "tale" he relates were gathered from any class other than the Communist and Socialist mobs and, perhaps, from a few deluded Socialist pseudo-intellectuals.

He states, referring to the so-called privileged classes, that they were "poorly informed—imagining Communism to be on their doorsteps." May I suggest that they were certainly poorly informed, but not in the way Mr. Gibson would have us believe. The decent, Christian people of Spain, like the Christian workers of Canada, ridiculed the idea that Communism was anything but a "bogey"—a mythical and fantastic creature of scaremongers. But to the horror of all true Spaniards, the wolf of Communism was found not to be a fanciful bogey, but a grim and horrible monster already inside the very door of Spain.

Surely, Mr. Gibson knows that before the reign of terror, strikes, murders and wholesale church burning which followed and were condoned by the Popular Front, the number of Fascists in Spain was infinitesimal, limited only to the Spanish phalanx of the since foully murdered Primo de Rivera II. To any student of Spanish politics it is rather amusing to hear the oft-exploded and odious calumny that Jose Maria Gil Robles, leader of the Catholic Action, planned to set up a state on the pattern of the Middle Ages.

Mr. Gibson refers to the "overwhelming" victory of the Popular Front. How overwhelming this was, was related by Basil Bunting, writing in a recent issue of the English Leftist magazine Spectator. Mr. Bunting relates how, when the returning officers, who were almost all sympathetic with the Popular Front, saw that the returns from districts known to be anti-Socialist would greatly outnumber the ballots marked in favor of the Popular Front they conveniently closed the boxes, sending only those returns to Madrid which were from their fellow Socialists, etc. Even with such typically Communist tactics, the "overwhelming" victory consisted of 46 per cent of the votes cast. Due to further "convenient" arranging on the part of the Reds, two-thirds of the deputies in the Cortes were of the Popular Front.

If Comrade Gibson had even the slightest knowledge of the tactics of the United (or Popular) Front, as formulated by Dimitroff at the Seventh World Congress of the Communist International, he would not have the audacity to suggest that the internal tension and flagrant terrorism were organized by the so-called "Fascists." Rather it was the Communist and Socialist brigades who, in accordance with the plans of Dimitroff, turned the industrial life of Spain into chaos, the distribution of food into a haphazard puzzle and in the short space of three months burnt over two hundred of the most beautiful churches in Spain as well as murdering scores of priests, nuns and suspected Fascists.

Whether Mr. Gibson realizes it or not, support of the Madrid dictatorship of Indalecio Prieto is support of a terrorist group whose avowed objective is the destruction of all religion and the setting up of a Communist reign of terror worse, if possible, than that of Stalin in Russia.

P. HARTNELL.

MORE DELUSIONS!

To the Editor:—Reckless misstatements as to unemployment in Russia by Mr. Averill and "Student" have been printed recently in your paper.

The former relies on Chamberlain's "Soviet Russia" written in 1929, since which date greater changes have taken place than occur in most countries in a century.

Mr. Averill states: "In Russia, today there is unemployment even among factory workers and clerks. Official figures in 1929 put it at 1,300,000." Both statements are false. There was no involuntary unemployment in Russia in 1929 or subsequently, and there is none today.

Chamberlain's figures as to employment end in the autumn of 1928. The truth is stated in Lord and Lady Passfield's recent authoritative work, based on six years' study by our greatest authorities on labor problems. They state, page 665, "By 1929 there was actual scarcity of labor. By October, 1930, the unsatisfied demand for workers was so general that all benefit to the healthy able-bodied unemployed was discontinued. A large proportion of the thousands of enterprises in the U.S.S.R. have been for the past six years (1930-1935) continuously unable to get as many skilled operatives, and for long periods not even as many unskilled laborers, as they were able and anxious to take into employment." Recently, the government stated that it had work for several million additional workers, skilled and unskilled.

Mr. Averill knows as little about Russia as I think he and other Douglasites know about economics. It would take pages of your paper to expose the fallacies he and Major Jukes have perpetrated therein in the last month.

For instance, he asks, supposing Russia produced abundance, "where would the money come from to pay for the goods?"—showing that he is blissfully ignorant of the fact that production creates purchasing power, and consequently the people can purchase all they produce although production has increased five-fold in recent years.

It is maldistribution of wealth, not any shortage of money, that hampers consumption. Money was never cheaper or more plentiful than now. Mr. Jacques, M.P., stated: "One day I read the Dean of Canterbury's article on Social Credit and found the solution I wanted"—a clear case of the "blind leading the blind," for both are economic illiterates. "Student" states that Russia's army is recruited from the unemployed. This is a fiction for there are no unemployed, and idlers are not accepted as recruits. Further, as Passfield (Sidney Webb) states (p. 126) troops in addition to their military exercises "are continually being called out to help, not only in the agricultural operations of the locality, but also in all sorts of industrial work in which extra labor force is urgently needed, whether in such operations of civil engineering as roads and bridges, railways and embankments, or in repairing buildings, restoring telegraphic communications, or mending machines of every kind." There is useful employment for everyone in Russia, soldiers included. Moreover, German Jews and other refugees are being constantly absorbed in productive employment. "Student" should return to his studies, for it is really deplorable that men who know nothing about economics, or apparently anything else, should parade their ignorance in the press. A. B. SANDERS, 804 Foul Bay Road. Whale oil is being used by German chemists in making varnishes as a substitute for linseed oil or tung oil. Florida's cabbage palmetto trees gave the early Indians cabbage and celery-like buds for food, and fan-shaped leaves for thatching huts.

YOUR HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

College students, a recent survey establishes, are taller and built better than those who do not go to college. The reason for this is still a matter for conjecture, but apparently boys and girls who are destined for college grow more quickly during their childhood, and attain their maximum growth at an earlier age than does the rest of the population.

Studies made in various parts of the world indicate that brighter children generally are taller and heavier than average children of the same age. This, of course, cannot be taken to mean that big children necessarily are better than the smaller ones, since racial factors have a great deal to do with body development.

It is possible, however, that the economic condition of the family able to send its children to college may have something to do with the development of these youngsters. The provision of good food and housing, and of proper hygiene during childhood, must certainly be important in bringing about better developed children from a physical point of view. It is reported, for example, that the average income of families of students of the University of Minnesota is in the upper 30 per cent bracket of family incomes in general.

Recently, height and weight measurements were recorded for 23,000 college men and 17,000 college women. The American college woman, at the age of sixteen, it was found, is heavier than the girl who does not go to college. By the age of nineteen, the girl who has not gone to college weighs more, but is not as tall. College men are taller and heavier, at the age of sixteen, than men who do not go to college, and they keep

AUTHORS HEAR MRS. N. MCCLUNG

Gives Impressions of Canadian Authors' Association

"Poetry should not bore anyone. I think the trouble begins in school, when children are forced to memorize poetry as a punishment," said Mrs. Nellie McClung, recently appointed to the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission governing board. In a talk to the local branch of the Canadian Authors' Association yesterday evening.

Twenty-five authors attended the meeting, and heard delegates to the convention of the association in Vancouver describe their impressions. Mrs. Doris Ferne, convener of the poetry group, told of Victoria's part in the convention, and gave a brief sketch of Dr. E. J. Pratt, editor of The Canadian Poetry Magazine, who paid a special visit to the poets here recently.

Miss Carmen Higgins read a paper on "Nature in Poetry," pointing out the unity of man with nature. "Sanity lies in the natural. It is the duty of poets to see beyond the surface into the heart of things and bring what the mind finds into vivid reality," Miss Higgins said. Miss Eugenie Perry, president of the Victoria and Islands branch of the association, was in the chair.

CONFIDENCE MOVE PASSED

Good Faith of Mayor and Ald. Brown Emphasized in Council Resolution

The City Council yesterday evening stood squarely behind a resolution of confidence in the integrity and good faith of Mayor David Leeming and Alderman P. R. Brown in the negotiations towards launching the Henley refunding plan.

Alderman James Adam, elected by his fellow members as chairman of the meeting in the absence of the mayor and Alderman Brown, who were prevented from attending the session by a writ claiming their disqualification, vacated the chair to present the resolution.

It passed unanimously after the original resolution, which included a clause criticizing the action of plaintiff's counsel in the injunction of John Day against the city, had been altered to delete that section.

The resolution carried without a dissenting vote follows: "That the City Council hereby places on record an expression of its full confidence in the integrity, good intentions and loyalty of His Worship Mayor Leeming and Alderman Brown, and its genuine appreciation of their consistent and valued endeavors at all times to further the best interests of the City of Victoria."

TRIBUTE TO PAIR
Speaking to his motion, Alderman Adam said he considered it a matter of duty to two of the best citizens of Victoria. He paid tribute to Mayor Leeming, "a square shooter," and Alderman Brown for their long and faithful service to Victoria.

Alderman Archie Wills questioned the advisability of passing the original resolution from a point of view of possible libel contained in remarks regarding plaintiff's counsel in the injunction proceedings. He said he was in accord with expressions of confidence in the mayor and Alderman Brown.

Alderman Walter Luney said he thought no Alderman should hesitate to support the resolution, if his facts were true.

Alderman Ed Williams voiced his approval of the latter part of the resolution regarding the integrity and good faith of the mayor and Alderman Brown. But he did not think it the part of the council to criticize a lawyer for his arguments before the court.

Alderman Stanley Okell reiterated his belief the method of procedure in the Henley plan had been badly managed, but he believed the council should be unanimous in supporting the resolution regarding the good faith of the mayor and Alderman Brown. "He suggested the resolution be changed to eliminate the reference to the lawyer concerned."

Alderman R. A. C. Dewar declared his firm belief the only concern of the mayor and Alderman Brown in the Henley proposal was the interests of the city as a whole. He did not think for a moment the personal benefit of a trip to England was a consideration for them. He was in favor of the resolution regarding the support of the two officials.

Alderman T. W. C. Hawkins also voiced his unqualified support of the resolution of confidence in the integrity of the mayor and Alderman Brown. He asked for the rereading of the resolution.

Alderman Wills again asked for a ruling from the city solicitor regarding possible libelous implications in the original. The city solicitor declined an immediate opinion, and Alderman McGavin, who occupied the chair during the discussion, suggested the matter be tabled for a week.

Alderman Okell asked the mover to amend his resolution, deleting the criticism of the lawyer, with the option of bringing it up at a later date.

Alderman Williams again pressed the point of possible legal repercussions from the criticism of the lawyer. The latter half of the resolution was presented, and carried unanimously.

A communication from Tail & Marchant seeking a stay in foreclosure proceedings by the city on the Ogden Point grain elevators, on behalf of the Panama Pacific Grain Terminals Limited, was referred to the finance and business and trades development committees by the City Council yesterday evening.

Legality of minutes of the two preceding meetings of the City Council was questioned by Alderman Andrew McGavin at yesterday evening's session of the city body. On the advice of the city clerk, Alderman James Adam, chairman of the meeting, declared them a true record of proceedings, and they were adopted with Alderman McGavin dissenting.

SPRINKLER TANK IN BAD CONDITION

Repair of the water tower which holds the reservoir needed for the sprinkler systems at the C.P.S. Mill and the B.C. Electric plant in that area, was left in the hands of the lands committee with power to act by the City Council yesterday evening.

Alderman R. A. C. Dewar, chairman of the committee, reported the tower to be in dangerous shape. He suggested the B.C. Electric be approached to help repair the reservoir if it wished to enjoy the protection service, but expressed the view the work should not be done unless it would result in a material reduction in fire insurance costs.

On the land committee's recommendation, repair to the arches in the old church building at the corner of Blanshard Street and Pandora Avenue was ordered at a cost of $50.

Two demolitions were ordered, as was an inspection of posts in the Market Building and the painting of a building front at 541 Yates Street.

Children in a Kentucky school are eating fewer sweets and drinking more milk, since they have observed effects of a poorly balanced diet on white rats.

Old Moscow is becoming modernized, the U.F.O. Labor Member of Parliament for Grey-Bruce said. Cobblestone streets are giving way to asphalt thoroughfares, buildings are being erected, hotels opened, student centres organized and universities built.

Scandinavian countries also are advancing rapidly, she found. Co-operative systems in both Sweden and Denmark have been beneficial to the countries, particularly the former where they have helped banish the depression.

Booth At Fair

Activities of Association Are Represented

The Y.W.C.A. has been the scene of great activity in preparation for the booth at the Victoria Fair. With posters in the background the booth presents the activities available to the girls of Victoria at the Y.W.C.A. this fall.

In the foreground there is a miniature display of the pep class on the gym floor, and a badminton court with four tiny figures in action. A typical informal club-group-completes this attractive model.

On either side there is a handcraft display of useful articles that can be made during the winter in our supervised Craft Club.

Then last, but most certainly not least, is the contest, estimating the number of spots in the very smart afternoon dress on display. The nearest estimate will win the dress.

Galli-Curci Will Sing Again

Famed Prima Donna Regains Her Voice

Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 11.—Amelita Galli-Curci has won her great gamble. She will sing again.

A year ago the golden voice of the renowned coloratura soprano was stilled by an operation to remove a goitre. Her friends feared it might never again thrill music lovers. They termed the surgery her greatest gamble.

But last night manager Paul Longone announced she had recovered and

Weddings

WHITE—RAMSEY

A quiet wedding took place at 7 o'clock Saturday evening at the parsonage of the officiating minister, Rev. W. F. Burns, B.A., of the United Church of Canada, Duncan, when Miss Bertha Ramsey, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Ramsey, Hollywood Road, Marigold, became the bride of Mr. Jack White, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. White, Hollywood Crescent, Victoria. Only the immediate members of the families were present. After a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. White will make their home in Duncan.

LEAL—FATT

At Christ Church Cathedral yesterday at high noon, Right Reverend H. E. Sexton, Bishop of Columbia, united in the holy bonds of matrimony Miss Sydney Fatt, R.N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Fatt, of 601 Trutch Street, and Mr. William Leal of Victoria. Mr. Stanley Bulley played the wedding marches. Mr. Fatt gave his daughter away, and she was attended by her younger sister, Miss Patricia Fatt, and her brother, Mr. George Fatt, was best man. Relatives and a few intimate friends were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Fatt after the ceremony, the young couple leaving immediately afterwards for a short honeymoon on the mainland. They will make their home in Victoria.

McLEAN—BRAVENDER

Port Alberni United Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Monday evening last, when Alice Jean (Nora), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Bravender of Port Alberni, became the bride of Mr. James Barclay McLean, son of Mr. J. H. McLean and the late Mrs. McLean of Port Alberni.

Rev. A. McLean performed the ceremony in the presence of a very large number of guests and friends. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory point d'esprit over which hung a long circular veil of silk net, mounted with coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of pink bridal roses and carnations.

Mrs. Charles Christian, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor, gowning in primrose yellow point d'esprit. Miss Leslie Bravender was her sister's bridesmaid, attired in pale pink point d'esprit, and both carried bouquets of pink carnations and mature sweet pea blossoms. Miss Elaine Allwood was the flower girl in a flower dress of jade green georgette, and carried a bouquet of asters and sweet pea blossoms.

Mr. Donald McLean supported his brother as best man, while the ushers were Mr. Jack Bravender, brother of the bride, and Mr. Stanley Bett. During the interval of signing the register, Miss Leslie Bravender sang "Until," accompanied by Mr. Ronald Smith, who also played the bridal music. Following the service, a reception was held at the Eagles' Hall, where a buffet supper was served, the bride's table being centred with a four-tier wedding cake. A dance concluded the evening with music supplied by the Bohemian orchestra. When Mr. and Mrs. McLean left on their wedding trip to Victoria, Mrs. McLean wore an ensemble of silver grey cloth, with blue hat and accessories. They will reside at Port Alberni.

News of Clubwomen

The Tuckabatchee Club of the First Baptist Church met at the home of Miss Jessie Reynolds, Belmont Avenue, on Tuesday evening. Miss Nora Gibson presided during the devotional and business periods, after which each girl related an interesting event during her summer vacation. The executive had previously given a number of humorous topics for impromptu speeches, which proved most entertaining. During the evening Miss F. Phillimore and Miss Q. Taylor played pianoforte duets, and the evening was brought to a close with refreshments served by the social committee.

Junior Catholic Women's League.—The monthly business meeting of the Junior Catholic Women's League was held at the home of Miss A. Grant on September 8. Plans for the Junior Catholic Women's League and Children of Mary picnic were completed. The picnic will be held on Sunday, September 13, at 8 o'clock. A bus will leave the cathedral at 10:30 a.m. Plans are being made for the junior league dance which will be held on October 21, which Miss Morna Kelpin is convening. A rummage sale will also be held in October. The attendance prize was won by Miss Mary Morry. The meeting then adjourned, after which delightful refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Native Daughters.—The first regular monthly business meeting of the fall season of the Native Daughters of B.C. Post No. 3 was held on Wednesday evening, September 9, in the nights of Pythias Hall, Broad Street. The chief factor, Miss Jean Lorimer, presided. Following the opening of the meeting the daughters paid a silent tribute to the late Mr. Wm. Kinsman who was a valued member of the Native Sons of B.C. The historian, Miss Etta Neelands, gave an interesting report of the afternoon tea held by the Historical Society at the Murray Yale Farm recently. Miss B. Hawkins gave a report of the activities of a group now known as "The Preservation of the Natural Plants of B.C." made up of affiliated societies. A report of the very successful indoor picnic held in June was given by Mrs. A. Roach. A report was given of the Grand Post Convention held in Vancouver in June. Arrangements were made to hold a court

Prizes and Bursaries Awarded

To further higher education in Victoria, bursaries and prizes are given each year by the Women's Canadian Club, and this year those who have received awards include Miss Penelope E. Adamson of Oak Bay High School, who won the $100 bursary for the girl making the highest marks in the junior matriculation in Greater Victoria, not receiving any other bursaries.

Miss Adamson's percentage in the examination was 85. The $100 bursary for the boy competing under the same conditions was won by Basil Richards of the Victoria High School, who received 87.3 per cent in the examination.

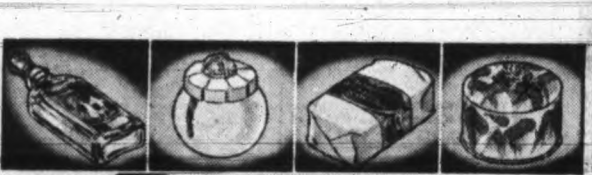

The Margaret Jenkins memorial prize of a year's membership with the Canadian Geographical Society, and monthly magazine for the pupil making the highest marks in Canadian history in the entrance class at the Margaret Jenkins School, was won by Ronald Satterfield.

George Jay and Sir James Douglas schools again tied for the home economics prize in grade 8. They divide the use of the silver tea service for the year, and each girl of the sewing class of twelve in both schools will receive a silver tea spoon.

The grade 7 prize for sewing was won by the Esquimalt school, for which the class receives $10 for the purchase of books for the classroom, and each girl of the sewing class of twelve receives a silver tea spoon.

G. Aldous, honorary vice-president; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Fletcher, Mrs. Hermann M. Robertson, Mrs. W. C. Nichol, Mrs. C. E. Wilson, Mrs. T. L. Thorpe-Douglas and Miss K. Agnew.

The Beaux-Arts will hold its opening reception in the form of a tea sent to any such prospective members.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BOOTS RABURN, eighteen and pretty, closes with RUSS LUND, handsome swimming instructor. Russ goes to Miami, promising to send for her later, and Boots gets a job in a New York department store.

Russ does not write. Months pass and then word comes that he has been killed in a motorboat accident.

Too proud to ask her parents for help, Boots struggles on alone. She meets DENIS PENWAY, young author, who introduces her to EDWARD VAN LINDER and beautiful KAY CHIL-LINGTON.

Denis helps Boots get a job in a book shop. Van Seiver, whom she has been avoiding, turns up again.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXVI

Boots faced Edward soberly across the small table. In a corner, screened behind flowering shrubs in green tubs, a string orchestra softly played.

"I don't honestly know," she confessed. "I don't know what to say."
Russ had been dead for eight months now. Whenever she thought of him it was with a little tug of pain, at her heartstrings. She knew now that what she had felt for Russ was merely attraction. If he had lived their life together would have been a mockery.

"We could slip away and be married very quietly, d'you see," Edward was saying ingratiatingly. "No publicity."

She made a little movement of dissent. "You're rushing me so," she complained. "I only said I would consider it."

"You like me, don't you?" Edward stared at her rather discontentedly.
"Of course I do. But that's not enough."

"Monsieur," said Edward triumphantly and with the air of settling the discussion.

The thought flashed into Boots's mind that marriage with Edward would square off old scores with Sybil and Patty and all the girls who had hurt her during that last summer in Larchmont. Oh, but did all that matter? When she married it must be for love and love alone, not because her ring would make Sybil Rivers open her eyes more widely.

Ab, but what Edward didn't understand was that liking wasn't enough to justify marriage. She had rushed pell mell into marriage before, un-considering, like a child playing a new game. Her lesson had been brief and bitter.

Edward had everything to recommend him. She reminded herself of looks, money, family, position. He had an equable disposition. His big laugh rang out heartily on every occasion. What matter then if her pulses did not race at his approach?

It was madness to expect that racing of the pulses. Denis—who stirred this response in her—belonged to someone else.

As though divining her thoughts,
Edward said carelessly, "Saw Kay and Denis last night."

Her heart raced like a wild thing; stopped; raced again. Her voice was very cool, uncaring. "Did you really?"

"Ummmm. At the Casino. Kay looked a knockout."

How did Denis look, cried her hungry heart. Was he thin and fine drawn, silent and aloof? Was he mocking and cruel? Did he speak of me?

Edward said, "She's very good looking."

Edward ate caviar with relish, nodding. He liked good food, good wines. He always had the best table at restaurant or night club.

He had ringed seats at the fights.
He had stabs for first nights of good plays. If she married Edward she wouldn't have to worry about bills.
She would have supplies for to wrap around her, sleek chiffons and silks, fine laces.

"What's on your mind, loveliness?"
She smiled at him. "Will Denis and Kay be married soon, do you think?"

"Don't know. They said so last summer. Probably they'll just run down to City Hall some morning and do it without fuss."

Let them do it and be over with it. Boots eyed Edward herself that icy hand squeezing her hand. Let them marry and send out cards and have a penthouse and a cook and books and beds and the rest of it.

Then I'll put him out of my mind forever. I won't be thinking of another woman's husband.

Kay, as a young wife, dark, glowing, beautiful; Denis bending over her, proud, disdainful of all others.
No, no, she couldn't bear it! She could be going back and forth to the Bay Tree every day and some day she would meet Denis on the street.

Oh, better to be dead and buried than to meet Denis then!

"We'd go abroad after we married," Edward was saying fatuously.
"You've never been little thing, have you? We'd do Paris and London and Vienna and Budapest."

She listened to him idly, as in a dream. She promised nothing out her eyes smiled vaguely and he accepted this as half a promise.

Later, in the shop, Frances Gar-try said to her, "He's really a very nice lad. I think you're a lucky girl." Someone else had said that—whom? One of the girls at Lucy's? But Francis was different. She was more worldly, more assured and she, too, thought Edward splendid.

Insensibly Boots was affected by these various pronouncements. She was kinder to Edward, gentler with him, sweeter, so that he came to adopt a completely possessive air with her. By October when her year of mourning for Russ was almost up she had met his people, believed tacitly approved by them. The web tightened around her.

One warm, rainy October morning she was alone in the shop when a slim, middle-aged woman in a bright blue raincoat walked in. She was altogether against the light and boots came forward with the polite, mechanical smile reserved for customers. Her manner changed abruptly. She rushed into the other woman's arms.

"Mother! Why, mother!"
They were laughing and crying all together. Mrs. Raburn's thin face worked spasmodically. She had to take off her rimless glasses to wipe away the bright drops.

"I-I had to come," she said
"I told me where you were—just the other day. My dear little girl! We thought you were down south and here you've been all this time!"

The ice about Boots's heart melted.
She had been steeling herself against this emotion, any emotion; but it seemed now she had been wrong. It was better to feel something, anything, rather than go on as she had been going, half-dead, half-alive.

Frances came in, furling a dripping umbrella, and had to be introduced. She was properly interested and cordial. She had heard part—of not all—of Boots's story.
Mrs. Raburn must stay. Frances insisted, and Barbara could take the early lunch hour. It didn't make a scrap of difference.

So the two women murmured over a scrubbed deal table in the nearby tearoom. There was so much to be said—so much bitterness to be glibbered over, so many things to explain.

"I wrote and wrote," Boots said,
"her eyes filling at the memory, 'but the letters came back unopened.'"

"I know," Mrs. Raburn shook her head. "Daddy—wouldn't have it be his softer now, dear. He says he sees how it all happened. He's been doing a lot of thinking since he's been in bed."

Mr. Raburn, it appeared, had had a light stroke. "He'll be up and about in two weeks, but of course he'll have to go very slowly. He'll have to be careful," his wife said.

"Florida lives with us now all the time. It helps. He's sitting up in a chair this week. I had to come to town to settle some business. I made up my mind I was going to find you."

Daddy's business, she explained, had been going down hill for some time. She didn't just know what her plans would be. He had some insurance maturing next month—not much, but enough to keep them afloat for a while. Florida was a paying guest.

"I can help," Boots offered youth-fully. "I'm saving some money now.
Together and we can cook over a gas stove and live on nothing a week."

Mrs. Raburn stiffened. Boots wasn't to think of it, she said. No, she and Daddy would manage; they always had. And she was doing some things for the Women's Exchange. . . . Right down rolls every day. And no part-time maid. It was amazing how little the table cost if you shopped at the chain stores.

She clung to the girl on parting.
She looked definitely older. The lines around her mouth had deepened their parentheses; her neck sagged.

"Come out and see Daddy some week-end," she begged. "He wants to see you. He's dying to, but you know how stubborn he is."

Boots promised. She watched her mother walk away, slim and worn in her rainy day clothes, and her heart ached. There was so much she ought to have to make her comfortable, to make life easier for her.

If Boots were Edward's wife she could do all that!

OLD SCHOOL TO BE TORN DOWN

Duncan Gives North Cowichan Authority to Remove Maple Bay Structure

Duncan, Sept. 11.—Duncan School Board on Wednesday evening gave the municipality of North Cowichan authority to tear down the old school house at Maple Bay. Miss Owens's request for release, to take over a position at the Fairbridge Farm School, was refused. The finance committee presented its report and accounts totaling $2,343.68, were passed for payment. R. Hodson, principal of the High School, reported on the registration of pupils in the new Junior High, and Senior High Schools. The maximum estimated has been reached, the classrooms in the junior high school being slightly over-taxed. The board, to relieve the pressure, decided the appointment of another teacher be authorized, qualified to teach English and social studies and have academic qualifications.

The schools will be closed at 2 p.m. on Friday to allow pupils to see the gymnastic display put on under the auspices of the department of education. Robert Wood will be presented with the Governor-General's medal, won in the recent examinations. The special committee appointed to arrange the affairs of the new junior high school reported they had made all necessary alterations and purchased equipment. Principal Blanchard of the elementary school, reported attendance up to the maximum, and also on the new curriculum laid down by the department.

Saanich Rejects New Bus Schedule

A revised schedule on the Douglas-Agnes-Ralph bus line was rejected by the Saanich Council yesterday evening when presented by the Vancouver Island Coach Lines. The new schedule was turned down on the grounds it could not be operated with safety, despite assurance from Harold Husband, of the Coach Lines, that it could. The schedule was changed, Mr. Husband said, to eliminate a twelve minute stopover at each end of the run.

The plan was rejected on a split vote, Councillors E. C. Warren, John Watson, A. G. Lambie and L. G. Pasmore voting to retain the old schedule and Councillors W. R. Woods, H. D. Cotton and L. C. Hagan favoring a month's tryout of the new schedule. The council decided to ask for a loop system on the Douglas-Agnes route to include Glanford Avenue.

Improvements In Cookery Lower Cost Electricity Reduces Expense of Modern Ranges

A few years ago cooking with electricity was the privilege of only the rich homes. And while it has remained the secret ambition of many penny-wise housewives, until recently it has been considered a luxury. Today electric cookery stands, as far as costs go, with the rank and file of cooking methods, and many women even report a decrease in their budgets after a change over from old methods.

This drop in the cost of electric cooking, has been brought about largely by steady, step by step reductions in the cost of electricity, and is continually being furthered by careful research on the part of the electric range manufacturers, who are bringing their ranges, year by year, towards perfect efficiency and economy. Prominent in this research activity is the Canadian General Electric Company, whose Hotpoint electric ranges are famous the world over for their advanced features and all-round efficiency.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS
Electric ranges built only a few years back do not bear comparison in any respect with those of today. So great have been the recent improvements in design and manufacture, that an electric range which is only three or four years old has as often as not been completely out-classed.

Electric ranges are now fast, and modern electric elements are even more efficient and economical than the older ones. Housewives with electric ranges now boast of their "economy cookers," a built-in electric casserole developed by the General Electric Company and a popular feature of their Hotpoint electric ranges, of which there are many in use in Victoria. The ovens of modern electric ranges are extremely reliable and economical. Automatic time and temperature controls ensure uniform cooking results, and give the housewife hours of extra leisure. Ranges are so heavily insulated that the current may be turned off when a meal is not more than half cooked, and the stored heat will finish the cooking. The latest Hotpoint ranges employ as much as one and a half inches of solid insulation in some of their parts. Cleanliness has, of course, always been the rule with electric cooking. These same Hotpoint ranges have their surface elements trimmed with chrome steel. Larger models have roomy drawers in which the cook can conveniently store all her pots and pans.

A WOMAN'S DREAM

Electric ranges are now designed as units in a final all-electric kitchen. They are made to be strikingly beautiful by themselves, but with an eye to the housewife's growing demand for uniformity with other appliances that they will fit in, in perfect taste, with the coming all-electric kitchen.

ALBERNI

Alberni, Sept. 11.—Miss Alberta Hobson of the teaching staff of the public school, has left for Trail, called there through the serious condition of her brother, who sustained injuries in a motorcycle collision near Roseland. Mrs. A. McNeill is assuming Miss Hobson's duties during her absence.

Mrs. George Stocker accompanied by her son, Grant, will leave on Friday for Oxbow, Sask., where she will spend the next month visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Langrish. Mrs. J. Young of Victoria, is spending two weeks here the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Redford at Fifth Avenue.

Mrs. W. H. Booth, formerly of Victoria, now residing with her daughter, Mrs. C. Brown, was elected president of the Ladies' Guild of St. Alban's Anglican Church, and presided at the opening meeting of the fall session on Tuesday.

Floodlighting the farmyard to make night chores easier is a feature of an electrified farm.

DELEGATES WILL BE CUT

Reduction Assured in Delegation to Annual Convention of Municipalities

Although eight members of the City Council were appointed to attend the annual convention of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities and Good Roads League meeting in Vernon, starting on September 20, not more than five and possibly not that many will attend the gathering.

The size of the Victoria delegation was attacked by Alderman Walter Luney yesterday evening. He remarked upon the moves for economy in the council and referred to the criticism to which the size of the representation to Great Britain on the Home-Refunding scheme had been subjected. While eight delegates had been appointed to the Vernon meeting only five could vote, he said. He asked that the motion appointing them be rescinded.

Discussion revealed Mayor David Leeming would be required at the convention in the capacity of vice-president of the union, leaving seven aldermen still on the list.

Alderman R. A. C. Dewar and Alderman Luney asked their names to be struck off the list. Alderman Dewar noting that would leave the required five. Alderman Ed. Williams said he had no intention of going.

NOT PRESENT

Alderman Archie Willis remarked he and Alderman James Adam and Alderman T. W. C. Hawkins had been absent from the meeting at which the delegation had been named, and voted upon by an incomplete council which did, however, include Alderman Luney. He thought the absent members should be spared the criticism.

Alderman Dewar noted Alderman

Adam and Andrew McGavin had been appointed to sponsor particular resolutions.

Alderman McGavin said the council could strike his name off the list, but he thought that if he attended he could put through his resolutions regarding police magistrate appointments and motor licenses.

Alderman Dewar insisted Alderman McGavin should attend.

Alderman Stanley Okell thought Victoria should be well represented. After further discussion the motion of Alderman Luney was withdrawn, with the impression left the city might not avail itself of its full quota of representatives. None of the aldermen appointed fought to remain on the delegation.

DISEASE FIGHT OVER DECADES

Dr. K. Shiga Admits With Regret Bacillary Dysentery Still Unconquered

By Science Service
Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 11.—Bacillary dysentery, one of the great health hazards of tropical regions, which occasionally reaches into more northern parts, is still unconquered, scientists gathered here to celebrate Harvard's Tercentenary were told yesterday by Dr. Kiyoshi Shiga of the Kitasato Institute, Tokio.

Dr. Shiga more than thirty years ago discovered the bacillus or germ that causes dysentery. Yesterday he held with keen regret, in poetic, foreign-sounding English that made the regret seem more poignant, how, in spite of this discovery and a lifetime of subsequent research, the disease still defies the efforts of himself and other scientists to wipe it out.

"Discovery of the dysentery bacillus had stirred my young heart with new hopes of eradicating the disease and saving the sufferings of about 100,000 cases that occurred at the time," Dr. Shiga said. "Thirty-eight years have passed since this heart-throbbing event happened. Many thousands of people still suffer from it year to year, and the hope that once had been thought would bring new light had disappeared as a dream of summer night."

In the years that passed since the epochal discovery of Dr. Shiga's youth, much new knowledge has been gained about the disease, as Dr. Shiga related yesterday. Almost a hundred different strains of germs that cause the disease have been discovered. The poison produced by the germ has been studied and found to rank next to the toxins of tetanus (lockjaw) and diphtheria in strength. An antitoxin has been prepared and found effective in mild and moderately severe cases, but less effective in severe cases.

PROBLEM OF CARRIERS

Carriers of the bacillus present an important problem, as they do in typhoid fever.

"Suppression of carriers may be an important problem, but suppression of the cases is more feasible," Dr. Shiga declared. He recommends immunizing or raising the resistance of the general population, in countries where dysentery is a problem, by vaccination.

Here again, the scientists are checked in their efforts to wipe out the disease. A vaccine has been prepared against dysentery, and has been given by mouth to hundreds of thousands of people in Japan during the last ten years. Though the results are claimed to be favorable according to statistics, Dr. Shiga said yesterday that "a careful consideration" is still needed before accepting this method of vaccination.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today

SEPTEMBER 11, 1911
(From The Times Files)

A meeting of the delegates appointed by the Victoria and Vancouver rugby unions was held in Victoria on Saturday evening last. Messrs. Mackay and Evans, representing Vancouver, and Messrs. Scott and Spaulding for Victoria, were present at the meeting. Preliminary arrangements were made for sending a team to California at the end of October.

The president of the Canadian Northern Railway, Sir William Mackenzie, who was in the city recently, returned to the city again yesterday on the business of the Canadian Collieries.

Victoria's fifty-first annual fair closed on Saturday under most dismal circumstances, the rain pouring down all afternoon and evening.

Victoria West won the senior amateur soccer championship of British Columbia Saturday at Recreation Park by playing the V.A.C. senior amateur champions of the mainland to a scoreless draw in the final game of a series of two in which total goals counted.

Mr. and Mrs. Gideon Hicks left on Friday afternoon on a trip to New York and eastern Canada. Mr. and Mrs. Daniels, Esquimalt, and the Misses Daniels are spending a couple of weeks at Shawnigan Lake. W. D. Macintosh, cashier of the Canadian Collieries, who has been on a trip to Winnipeg, has returned to the city.

The Prescription

A fair lady troubled with frost-bitten legs visited the local doctor and was handed a prescription. Without a glance at it she hurried to the village chemist, and to her astonishment was advised "to have this particular prescription dispensed at the ladies' outfitting stores. Taking back the prescription, this is what it read: "One pair of stockings, woolen, thick, to be applied to the legs daily during cold weather."

THE SPORTS MIRROR

By PETE SALLAWAY

THE NEW YORK YANKEES are under the wire. Wednesday saw Joe McCarthy's crew of ball-killers tie the pennant to the flag pole of the Yankee Stadium for the 1936 campaign. Rated as no better than third-place material in pre-season selections, the current edition of the homicide squad piled up one of the biggest pennant-winning leads in baseball history.

They topped a field in which the defending world champions, the Detroit Tigers; the $1,000,000 Boston Red Sox and the always powerful Cleveland Indians were considered outside odds and wound up with an eighteen-game lead over the pack after Wednesday's twin triumph. The double victory gave them ninety-two victories against forty-six defeats, with sixteen games still on their schedule.

The Yanks uncovered a batting punch down the entire lineup which few believed they had. They threatened several shattering records and were tagged "murderers" row—a nickname revived from the heyday of Babe Ruth and company. Four factors loomed large in their championship run. The first was the acquisition of Joe Di Maggio, who probably will go down as the outstanding rookie of 1936. The big batting year for Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey was another stand-out reason for the title triumph as well as the trades which brought Pitcher Monte Pearson and Outfielder Jake Powell to the lineup and the fine relief hurling of the veteran Pat Malone.

The particular forte of the revived "murderers" row was its ability to stop its challengers just when they got tough. Such was the case when the Red Sox threatened, and fell in four straight games with the Yanks. The situation was repeated when the Tigers came along fast, and when the Indians took over the runner-up spot.

They had their share of bad breaks, too. A slump hit them shortly after mid-season, but lasted only a few days. Another has been with them since about the first of this month, but with Wednesday's batting attack against the Indians they gave signs they are snapping out of it.

Injuries, while not frequent, have taken key men from the lineup. Dickey, the No. 1 catcher and second most dangerous hitter on the club, was laid up twice. Frank Crosetti, the shortstop, sprained his right arm, and Red Rolfe, third baseman, is just recovering from hurts. Gehrig, although still playing daily to keep up his endurance record, has been bothered with an injured finger and lame back for weeks.

Red Grange is not considering returning to the football wars as an active combatant this fall. The immortal Galloping Ghost again will confine his activities to assisting George Halas in coaching the Chicago Bears. The old Illinois luminary retired as a player last season, after ten years of professional effort. He admits he can't take it any more.

It would like to keep playing, but I sure hate to get hit," said Grange. "When young 200-pounders smash from college bring into you at top speed they leave an impression. And when you are thirty-three years old the impression is inclined to be permanent."

So Howie Morenz is back with the Canadiens, where he really belongs, and the club he should never have been permitted to leave. The flying Frenchman fell on evil days even before Morenz departed for Chicago, but they seemed to become steady occupants of the headline without him. He is brought back, not perhaps because the Canadian management imagines that he is the flaming meteor of old, but because it knows that the move will be popular with the French fans and popular favor is what is being courted today.

Wherever hockey players gear is argued, three names are invariably raised. They are Frankie Boucher, Frank Nighbor and Howie Morenz. Once the discussion eliminates the others it can go on far into the night or, more frequently, late in the morning claiming that and that for one or other of the trio.

Regardless of what may be contended for any of the three, and irrespective of the fact that such an argument will never be settled to general satisfaction, there can be no denying the claims of Howie Morenz to greatness.

With Canadiens he was a sensation. A human thunder-bolt that raked (Turn to Page 14, Col. 5)

400 Thoroughbreds Stabled Here For Fourteen-day Meet

Seven Flat Races and Hurdles Event Will Be Daily Offering

FIRST POST AT 1.45 O'CLOCK

Victoria will "go to the races" earlier than ever before during the fourteen-day race meeting which will open at the Willows five-furlong oval tomorrow afternoon.

Due to the lateness of the season, officials of the racing association have fixed the time for first post at 1.45 o'clock. This is three-quarters of an hour earlier than usual and will allow completion of the eight-race card, including one hurdle event, before darkness.

The steeplechase events, incidentally will be the hardest of the B.C. season. In Vancouver the horses have been taking small brush jumps only, but now that they are educated they will face a stiff test of three brush jumps, a water leap and an open ditch in the course of one mile and a half. This is the first time in modern racing that hurdle events have been included with the regular race card.

LOTS OF HORSES
In the neighborhood of 400 thoroughbreds are stabled here for the two weeks' meeting, and the local race-goers have been fortunate in that a higher class of horses than usual will take part in the daily events. It has been necessary to use the Colwood stables to provide accommodation.

Such good western breeds as Peach Stone, Mac Pharris, Lady Goldstream, Verna Loan, Ladyfry, Big Pine and Adam Somers are available for races confined to the races for home-produced stock.

There are some good ones for the Handicap division as well, including the brilliant Shasta Dream, winner of eight out of ten starts on the mainland, Herb Fullerton's Wacina, now at the top of her form as indicated by a cracking win in the final handicap at Hastings Park; Lieutenant, the distance-running Marcus Doole and Charles Farrell's good sprinter Mr. Spence.

VENTURE ISLAND OWNERS, who usually figure on a good share of the purses at Willows, have their stables here in full force.

TWENTY JUMPERS
The hurdle events will be run on the oval inside the race-course. More than twenty jumpers are listed for these performances, and as long as there are no mishaps to throw the timber tappers out of training, there should be little trouble filling the events each day.

Champions of British Columbia and the prairies will hook up in the jumping division. Ed Carson's Boy O'Mine, who failed to make his mark on the flat but came back to the races as a superior hurdler, holds the B.C. honors with six firsts this year. Dr. Millerick and Never Late from the prairies will give him lots of competition, however. Other local winners who will compete are Ella Madeline, Argue, Grey Cloud, Bonadina, Somers' Choice, Cortez, Eagles Home and Quince Lad. A newcomer to the jumps is Ilston Whittier which race fans will remember on the flat here.

HEDLEY VERITY WILL NOT SAIL
London, Sept. 11.—Hedley Verity, Yorkshire professional chosen to play on England's cricket team, may not be able to join his mates when they start for the Commonwealth tomorrow. He is laid up with an attack of influenza.

He has been advised by physicians to forego the trip but if his condition shows improvement he may fly from Southampton, otherwise the left-handed bowler may travel overland next week and join the boat at Toulon.

THISTLES MEET
A meeting of the Spanish Thistles first division football team will be held in The Colonist boardroom Monday evening at 7.30 o'clock. All last year's players and others interested are asked to attend.

PAYS $75,000 FOR YEARLING

Doncaster, Eng., Sept. 11.—A record price was paid for a yearling horse at a public auction in England yesterday evening when Dorothy Paget bid 15,000 guineas (about $75,000) to win a spirited bidding duel with Mrs. Colette Glorney.

Miss Paget, owner of the famous jumper Golden Miller, bought the colt by Fairway out of Golden Hair, from Viscount Furness when Mrs. Glorney dropped out after a bid of 14,500 guineas.

NEW SET-UP IN TABLE TENNIS

League and Club Amalgamated Into Association; Intercity Matches

The amalgamation of the Victoria Table Tennis Club and the Victoria Table Tennis League was made at a meeting of table tennis players in the Y.M.C.A. yesterday evening.

The new organization will be known as the Victoria Table Tennis Association and a permanent home for it is being sought. The amalgamation was brought about as players here could come under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Table Tennis Association.

The officers of the new association, who were elected yesterday evening, are as follows: Tom McClure, president; Lionel Cox, vice-president; Ray Rigby, secretary; W. Browne, treasurer; J. Perkins and H. Pender, committee.

The new association is now looking round for a suitable hall, where it may install tables which will be up all the time. The league, which now comes under the association will play its matches at this hall.

TWO DIVISIONS
The league will again be divided into two divisions, and same number of teams as last year are expected. Team entries must be in the hands of Secretary Rigby, G. 8171, or E. 7862, before Saturday, September 19. The first division will get under way on Tuesday, September 22, and the second division on Wednesday, September 23.

The usual open island and closed city tournaments will be held, with the dates to be selected by the committee.

Intercity matches between Duncan, Vancouver, Seattle and Portland will be arranged during the season, according to officers at the meeting.

The Bulletin, a monthly sheet on local table tennis topics, will be left in the hands of the committee, and it will decide whether it will be issued as the official organ of the association or as a private paper.

The hall to be used in all league matches and tournaments is the Barna, official world championship ball, and accepted by table tennis associations of Great Britain, Canada and the United States.

NEWCO'ERS TO APPEAR HERE
Three new faces, Manley Meade, "Happy" Hogan and Leo Papiano, will appear in Victoria's mat ring tomorrow evening as Promoter Fred Richardson opens his winter wrestling season at the Tillamook gym with a three-bout card.

Manley Meade is a new arrival on the coast and little is known about his record as a bone-bender. He will engage Glen Stone, colorful grappler from Olympia, in the semi-main five eight-minute round tussle.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS

—By John Hix

GERONIMO

Probably the most troublesome single thorn in the side of the U.S. War Department in all its history was Geronimo, Apache chieftain of the Chiricahua tribe.

A forewarned enemy of the white man, the wily Indian on his periodic forays, caused a veritable reign of terror throughout the entire states of New Mexico and Arizona between 1884 and 1886. Never heading a band of more than thirty-eight members many of whom were young boys, Geronimo had 5,000 troops of the regular U.S. army vainly attempting to run him down for a period of about five years. On one occasion, forced to a pitched battle with only twenty warriors and hampered by fourteen squaws, Geronimo actually held at bay an American force of 2,000 soldiers and Mexican troops numbering several thousand more, eventually escaping without losing a single member of his band.

Finally cornered by a strong force under the command of Gen. Crook on March 25, 1886, Geronimo offered to quit his marauding activities for a period of two years, the members of his band to be sent east with their families and replaced by other Indians on the old reservation. Accepting his terms, Gen. Crook placed his captives under guard and started off for Fort Bowie. Before they were half way there, the entire band escaped and fled to the mountains, shortly afterward recommencing their old activities of raids and plundering in white settlements.

As a result of Crook's blunder in allowing the Indian band to escape, the general was relieved of his command and Gen. Miles took the field against Geronimo. Finally forced to surrender again, Geronimo was taken captive and sent to Fort Pickens, Florida. Later transferred to Fort Sill, Oklahoma, he died there, unbroken in spirit, February 17, 1909.

SILVER RIVER
Strange as it seems, the Rio de la Plata, Spanish for "Silver River," is really only a large indentation in the Argentine coast. No silver has ever been found in the vicinity.

Tomorrow: The Vacant Tombs.

Bun Cook Is Sold To Boston Bruins

Signalizes Breaking Up of Famous Line of New York Rangers of Cook Brothers and Frank Boucher; Canadiens and Boston Trade Players

New York, Sept. 11.—Those masters of puck prestidigitation, the brothers Cook and Frankie Boucher, will not terrorize National Hockey League goalies as a unit this winter.

Fred Cook, better known as "Bunny" and who hops about on agile skates not unlike a rabbit, was sold yesterday by New York Rangers to Boston Bruins. The deal signalizes the breaking up of a forward line ranked among the greatest the sport has known in the last decade.

President Charles Adams of the Bruins announced the deal, along with a mass trade between his club and Montreal Canadiens.

Adams said the Bruins sent defenseman, Babe Siebert and Roger Jenkins to the Canadiens for Wingmen Leroy Goldworthy and Sammy McManis and a bag of gold.

The amount of cash in the transaction was not revealed but Adams indicated some of it was used to purchase the younger of the Cook brothers.

LEVIN WINS OVER FRALEY
Heavyweight Wrestling Champion Scores Odd Fall Victory at Vancouver

Vancouver, Sept. 11.—Jamaica's Dave Levin was still "boss" among North American men of the mat today, and Pat Fraley was brooding over miffing his "big chance" against Levin yesterday evening in a bout billed for the world wrestling crown.

Following his bout with Vincent Lopez, in which he put the Mexican, Levin's scheduled opponent, out of commission, Fraley was selected by the popular vote of Mr. Fan at the ringside yesterday evening to meet the man from Jamaica.

Seattle Star Rules Heavy Favorite For United States Amateur Championship Starting Monday at Garden City, L.I.; R. Somerville Has Fine Round

Garden City, L.I., Sept. 11.—The British Walker Cup players pick Albert "Scotty" Campbell over Johnny Goodman as the man to beat in the United States amateur golf championship starting Monday.

The extremes of Campbell's game are unusually sound, and if you can drive and putt here you'll be hard to beat.

This from Jack McLean, the whisky salesman from Glasgow, who with Hector Thomson, the British amateur champion, is conceded the best chance among the players from the other side.

The Brits refuse to get into any detailed discussion of the merits and demerits for the outstanding American amateurs, but they have been sounding praises of Campbell, a double winner of the Canadian title.

LIKE GREENS
Despite their inglorious showing in the cup matches at Pine Valley, the British players have taken heart at the sight of the Garden City course. Here the wind is high and the greens firm and fast. Furthermore, the greens are generally on the level of the fairway and are excellent targets for the favorite British pitch and run shot.

"We feel more at home here," said Dr. William Tredwell, the British captain. "The turf has some of that seaside spring we know at home. The greens are solid and demand a good touch."

Of the nineteen invading players in the field, the experts list three who have a definite chance of taking the title out of the country. They are Thomson, McLean and C. Ross "Sandy" Somerville, the steady-going Canadian.

Yesterday Somerville, who won the title in 1932, shot the course in 40-31-71.

Somerville was wild with his shots on the outgoing nine, but scored four pars and five birdies coming home.

His card:
Par out ..... 43 44 44 44 44—37
Somerville ..... 43 36 45 43—36—73
Par in ..... 44 43 44 43—36—73

PARKER WINS LENGTHY DUEL

Defeats Mangin 10-12, 6-0, 4-6, 6-1, 6-3 in U.S. National Tennis

Forest Hills, N.Y., Sept. 11.—Seven thousand tennis fans, hungry for an upset of some sort, were set down last yesterday, but they were treated to a most spectacular exhibition of top-flight volleying as Gregory Mangin went down to defeat before young Frank Parker and the United States' singles championships were reduced to eight players—two from England.

Parker, younger and stronger, had too much stamina for Mangin, winning at 10-12, 6-0, 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, while his opponent in one of today's semi-finals, red-headed Don Budge, waded through John McDiarmid in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

The other men's semi-finalists, Fred Perry, England, winner in 1933 and 1934, and Bryan "Bitty" Grant Jr., the Georgia giant-killer, gained their brackets Wednesday. In view of his smashing triumph over the little Atlantan at Wimbledon two months ago, Perry again is expected to trim Grant, while Budge, on the strength of his improved showing yesterday, is figured to beat Parker.

FINALS TOMORROW
Thus, the long-anticipated meeting on American turf between Budge and Perry probably will take place in tomorrow's final. On present and past performances, Perry is rated almost a clinch to become the first invader to win the title three times.

Helen Jacobs cheered the hearts of supporters, rooting for her to win the women's championship for the fifth straight year by crushing the San Francisco southpaw, Gussie Reagen, 6-1, 6-0. Today Miss Jacobs was to oppose the crack English southpaw, Kay Stampers, in what should be Miss Jacobs' hardest assignment.

Giants Have Lead Sliced As Important Series Gets Started

New York Meets Chicago; Cubs Scheduled Next

National League Leaders Drubbed 7 to 2 By Cincinnati Reds

Portland Holds Lead in Coast

The pitching problem, which has been the biggest kind of a nightmare to Frankie Frisch all season, finally has caught up with Bill Terry.

And now the pilot of the pace-setting New York Giants, whose hurling was the envy of the league for weeks, is in just as much of a hole as his closest rival for the National flag—Frisch and his gas house gang of Cardinals.

This hurling collapse, in which only Carl Hubbell and Freddy Fitzsimmons seem able to hold their own, has made anything but a song and dance out of the Giants' current home stand, to which they returned triumphantly only a week ago, and points to the year's most "crucial" series between the New Yorkers and the battling Cards in their three-game set Sunday and Monday.

The pitching passed out again in the late innings yesterday, and the pesky Cincinnati Reds made it two straight over the Giants with a 7 to 2 decision off Gabby Gabler. The Cards pulled out their second close one in a row over the troublesome Boston Bees 3 to 2, with a two-run rally in the ninth, and the still dangerous Chicago Cubs noosed out the Phillies by the same margin on Stan Hack's eighth-inning homer.

TOUGH SCHEDULE
This left the Giants only three and a half games in front of the Cards, with both the gas house gang and the Cubs coming up in the next four days, starting today.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, whose chances are almost non-existent, finished their season's series at Brooklyn with an 11 to 5 win. In the American League, even though the New York Yanks have sewed up the pennant, the warfare remained plenty hot yesterday in the battling for second and third place. The second-place Chicago White Sox were idle, while the Detroit Tigers moved up into a third place tie with Washington by bowling over the Washington Senators 5 to 2.

Hal Trosky came through with a game-winning homer in the ninth to give the Cleveland Indians a 5 to 4 win over the Yankees. The Philadelphia Athletics fired a sixteen-hit attack at the St. Louis Browns for a 12 to 7 victory in the opener of a double header, but the nightcap was called in the ninth because of darkness with the score four all.

Portland advanced a step nearer mathematical certainty of first place in the Coast League race today as it took its third straight victory over San Francisco's Seals during the day.

The Seattle-Portland game was a hurling duel for seven innings between George Caster and Ray Lucas, with the score tied 1 to 1. Then in the eighth the Beavers got two walks, followed by manager Bill Sweeney's single and Johnny Frederick's lousy double to score three runs. The tribe loaded the bags in the ninth, but got only two runs across as Caster chalked up his twenty-fifth win of the year and ran his strikeout total up to 222.

Red Sox had the Oaks blunked for six innings, but the Acorns tied the score in the seventh, then drove the young right-hander to the showers in the eighth with a four-run attack for an 8 to 3 victory. The victory assured the Oaks of finishing in the first

Canadian Women's Golf Draws Stars

National Tournament Next Week at Montreal Will See Patty Berg Attempt to Take Title Back to U.S.; Ada Mackenzie Defends Honors; B.C. Entries

Montreal, Sept. 11.—Vanguard of the firing forces in the Canadian women's open golf championship moved on Montreal today in preparation for play in the Dominion's premier feminine golf event of the year. The golf courses of Montreal and district were crowded with the practicing feminine stars.

Not a ball will be shot in championship play over Royal Montreal until Monday, but the stars from Vancouver to Newfoundland, and some from the United States, came early for a final touching up of their drivers, irons and putters. It is practice time for a tournament that promises the keenest competition in years.

The defending champion, Miss Ada Mackenzie, Toronto, won't be such a big favorite this year. It's that kind of play—where a host have a chance and an outstanding United States golfer is the people's choice.

Young Patty Berg, Minneapolis, third-ranking woman player in the United States, has been chosen as the invader to spoil Miss Mackenzie's bid for her sixth open crown and to take the title back to the United States, where it hasn't been since 1931. On form she is the one to beat.

But match play golf seldom runs to form and that is why the young Minneapolis girl is not conceded much edge. There's another girl from the United States—Marian McDougall, Portland, Ore., twice Pacific coast champion, and a score of Canadians capable of upsetting Miss Berg should she have an off day.

Undoubtedly the main Canadian hope is Miss Mackenzie. The long-hitting Torontonian, despite what she may do in provincial or club play throughout the year, seems to rise to the heights in the open. A winner five times, she always has been close in her unsuccessful tries.

Four women from Winnipeg, who will represent Manitoba in the inter-provincial matches Saturday, are headed by Barbara Norwood, Altona, B.C., and Mrs. J. Train Gray, Calgary, is entered, and British Columbia's foursome for the inter-provincial and close play includes Kay Farrell and Marcia Moss, Vancouver.

He broke a tie with Bill Dickey of the Yankees, who was idle and slipped to fourth place. In the National League, Paul Waner of the Pirates, boosted his first-place margin to thirteen points over second-place Ducky Medwick of the Cardinals, by getting two hits in four chances, while Medwick went hitless in five trips to the plate.

SPORTS MIRROR

With almost unbelievable speed up and down the ice lanes, his play was splashed with color and hockey has had few, if any, more vivid personalities. In his heyday Howie Morenz was one of the strongest gate magnets the game has seen. He helped pack arenas all over the National League circuit, and he was worth every cent he ever drew from the Canadian club.

He had speed, a terrific shot, and rare courage for a player of his weight. Morenz never took a stiff bodycheck or a trip without going back at the player who picked on him, and he did not wait long to get even. He had a stormy temperament that would not let him delay until things were squared to his personal satisfaction. He won't be quite the same brilliant player as he was in the days of his fiery youth. Years have taken some of the spring from his legs and robbed him of some of his aggressiveness. Yet he should regain a lot of his former dash and vigor now that he is back with Canadiens and in the uniform that he never should have doffed.

VICTORIA GOLF PLAYERS LOSE

Mrs. Huse, Mrs. Cuppage and Cecil Brown Beaten in Jasper Tourney

Jasper Park Lodge, Alta., Sept. 11.—Strength out strength yesterday in the play to reach the semi-finals of Totem Pole golf championship and as result of four games played in this flight, Bill Sharpe, Vancouver, and Bert Barnabe, Ottawa, will meet in top bracket with Lionel Morrison, Calgary, and Jack Starkey, Edmonton, meeting in the lower bracket.

In the women's championship, Mrs. Irma May, Edmonton, staged an upset to defeat Mrs. Z. Huse, Victoria, on the home green in the top half, while Mrs. S. P. Howell, Vancouver, defeated Mrs. E. M. Cuppage, Victoria, 2 and 1.

Two of the championship games were outstanding. Barnabe had a rare battle with Lang, who went out in 35 to be 2 up. Barnabe got a hole back with a birdie at the tenth, and they halted next two. Barnabe then won the long thirteenth and fourteenth to be 1 up. Long squared the match at the short "bad baby" hole. Barnabe played perfect to win the sixteenth and two halves ended the match.

KEEN MATCH
Morrison and Cecil Brown, Victoria, had a hectic battle with fortunes swaying from side to side. Morrison was 1 up at turn, and then he established a three-hole lead. Brown settled down to win four holes in a row and they played the eighteenth with Brown 1 up. Brown played a bad approach at the home green and conceded it to Morrison when he missed the putt. Morrison won the nineteenth and the match with a good four.

The other games were one-sided. Sharpe defeating Lewis 4 and 3, and Starkey beating Havens 7 and 6.

Good Fixtures In Old Country Soccer

Well-balanced Cards Will Be Offered in English and Scottish Leagues Tomorrow; Arsenal Engages Sunderland in Feature; Rangers Tackle Motherwell

London, Sept. 11.—A heavy list of mid-week games has taken its toll in injuries to players and many clubs in the English football league are leaving composition of their sides until tomorrow, as the schedule rounds into its third week.

With grounds becoming hotter, footballers are quickly rounding into form and settling down sufficiently for supporters to weigh possibilities of their favorites.

Tomorrow's card brings together Arsenal, cupholder, and Sunderland, league champion, for the big game of the day. Neither team has shown to great advantage in the four matches played, each netting four points. Both are capable of playing class A soccer and are out to prove they are worthy of the honors captured in the 1934-35 season. They started poorly this year but reports from training camps are favorable.

Manchester will be the scene of a local "derby" between the newly-promoted United and Manchester City. The Maine Road eleven was shoved from first to fourth position during the week, while United is tied for nineteenth position with West Bromwich Albion.

SHOULD HOLD PLACE

Derby County switched places with Manchester City by defeating Sunderland, 3 to 0, last Wednesday, and should have no trouble holding the number one spot after its game with Sheffield Wednesday tomorrow. The Sheffield club triumphed over Everton, 6 to 4, yesterday.

Co-leaders with Derby are Charlton Athletic and Middlesbrough. Charlton got up to Leeds, and Middlesbrough is visited by Chelsea.

The high-priced Aston Villa continues to lead the second division. The Villans sent down last year for the first time in the club's long and colorful career, are not likely to have trouble with Burnley, while Burnley, runner-up, will have to fight hard to down Leicester City. Tottenham Hotspur, London favorites and the only club of the division yet to win a game, have an away contest at Newcastle.

The race in the southern section shows three teams tied for first position with six points each, and five in the number two spot with one point less. Bournemouth plays Millwall, while Bristol Rovers and Luton Town stay at home. The Rovers entertain Crystal Palace.

Three teams also share the lead in the northern section. Chester and Mansfield play on familiar soil, the former meeting Barrow and Mansfield is host to Carlisle United. The other leader, Hull City, tackles Accrington Stanley.

Glasgow, Sept. 11.—A well-balanced soccer programme is scheduled for tomorrow in the Scottish League. Two contests are outstanding, while in most of the other pairings rivalry is keen and followers of the national game are looking forward to a banner week-end.

Completion of the standing was changed during the week when Aberdeen vaulted into a clear top position lead over Motherwell with a 4 to 1 triumph over Arbroath, while the Fir Park representatives lost 3 to 1 to Hearts. Glasgow Rangers took over the number two spot after a scoreless draw with Third Lanark.

The "natural" of the day will be played at Ibrox Park between Rangers and Motherwell, and the other feature will be staged at Douglas Park between Hamilton Academicals and the fifth-place Celtic.

Along with Aberdeen, Rangers have yet to lose a game this season. A capacity crowd is assured at Glasgow's famous stadium.

CELTIC FAVORED

Hamilton Academicals' activities this year have not been on the sensation side, but the Accies can always supply stiff opposition to any club in the league, and although called to make it even wins in eight starts.

Aberdeen is also in for a stiff game at Pittodrie against Third Lanark. The Dons have yet to lose a game, and despite Third Lanark's giant-killing reputation, are expected to make it seven wins in eight starts.

Hearts hold down the fourth position, one-point up on Celtic. The Tynecastle Club is visited by Falkirk, up from the second division last spring. Odds favor the home team.

Other games that should produce first class battles are down for decision at Hampden Park between Queen's Park and St. Mirren, and at Murton Park, where St. Johnstone and Partick Thistle are scheduled.

In the second division, Raith Rovers, tied for first place with Morton, are practically certain to take two points from Edinburgh City, while Morton will have to fight hard to overcome East Fife, in third place.

BOB GRACE IS IN BAD HEALTH

Toronto, Sept. 11.—Manager Tommy Gorman, Montreal Maroons, conferred here today with Bob Grace, as to whether the speedy centre's health would permit him to line up with the National Hockey League team this winter. The former North Bay, Ont., boy has not been in good health this summer.

SOCCER PRACTICE

NEWS IN BRIEF

Instead of the usual exhibition of social art at the Victoria Fair this year there will be an excellent display of photography by the local advanced amateurs.

The Victoria Ministerial Association on Monday morning will resume its regular meetings with a session in the Y.W.C.A. at 10 o'clock. General business will be discussed.

The City Council yesterday evening accepted the invitation of Canon F. A. Chadwick to attend the seventy-fifth anniversary service in St. John's Church on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

Speedy trial of Reg. Wood, charged with illegal possession of stolen property, opened before Judge J. C. McIntosh in County Court today and was adjourned until this afternoon following the taking of evidence.

Question of the city's approval of tentative plans regarding the development of the Isolation Hospital at the Jubilee, as suggested by a special committee considering such work, was referred to the health committee by the City Council last night.

Matthew Scott, chemical engineer in the Carbon Carbide Corporation Limited, Berkeley, California, is spending his holidays here with his mother, Mrs. G. E. Scott, 1156 Pandora Avenue. Mr. Scott is well known in Victoria, having gone to school here. He was up at Cowichan fishing today.

Fred Radelet was sentenced to one month's hard labor when he was convicted in the Saanich Police Court yesterday on a charge of stealing gasoline from David Wernoch. This term will commence at the expiration of a three months' term imposed on the accused in the City Police Court on a possession charge.

The annual meeting of the Equimatt Young People's Club was held on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Officers for the year were elected as follows: President, Len Pearce, re-elected; vice-president, Wanda Spencer; secretary, Muriel Molloy; committee, Betty O'Leary, Esther Smith, Leslie Gill and Allan Harveys. Arrangements were made to have a dance on Tuesday, September 29. Refreshments were served.

Professor Ira Dilworth, associate head of the department of English at the University of British Columbia, returned last night to Vancouver, after spending the last two days here golfing and conferring with local educationists on educational matters. Following the special course of lectures he gave at the U.B.C. summer school, he will resume his regular courses of lectures at the university at the opening of the autumn and winter term this month.

In order to ascertain the general support of the musical people of the city in the proposed visit of the Seattle Symphony Orchestra, subscription lists have been opened at Fletcher Bros. David Spencer, 1262, and Fred Hudson's Bay Company. These lists will close September 22, when it is hoped a sufficient guarantee will have been received to have this splendid orchestra, under its gifted conductor, E. L. Cameron, to give one performance on Thursday evening, November 5, at the Royal Victoria Theatre.

The St. John Ambulance Brigade will begin classes of instruction at the headquarters in the Hibdon-Bone Building tonight at 7:45 o'clock. All members are requested to be on hand. The junior classes will begin just as soon as the arrangements can be completed. Each boy and girl will be notified individually sometime during the next two weeks.

ONE LOT SOLD IN ESQUIMALT

Only one lot out of eighty-four offered by the Esquimalt municipality has been bought at the tax sale which closed this morning. This lot was purchased yesterday for $258. There were no offers for sale of parcels of property this morning. The number of lots up for sale because of taxes in arrears, shows an increase. Last year Esquimalt offered seventy-seven parcels of property. Only one of these was taken.

WANTS INTEREST RATES REDUCED

Reduction of 1 per cent in interest charges on all agreements of sale with the municipality was sought by Councillor L. G. Passmore, Ward 7, at a Saanich Council meeting yesterday evening. The move followed recent action of the council in two cases where interest charges were reduced from 6 to 5 per cent. Councillor Passmore's suggestion would have a widespread effect and it was decided to secure a report on the entire situation for the next council meeting.

New Anglican Appointments

Canon S. J. Wickens, B.A., D.D., of Ekhore, Nam, has been appointed to the parish of Royal Oak and Strawberry Vale, and Rev. F. Buoy, M.A., has been made chaplain of Shawanigan Lake School.

TO PROPOSE NEW PLANS

Province Doubtful If Subsidy Employment Scheme Will Work Here

Doubtful if the new proposal for subsidizing unemployed in farming and private industry by the federal and provincial governments will prove of practical benefit in British Columbia, the provincial government will suggest counter-proposals to Ottawa to meet the situation in this province. Hon. George S. Pearson, Minister of Labor, said today.

What the nature of these plans will be Mr. Pearson said he could not say yet, as they have not been completed. Study by the relief and labor departments has shown, however, that the subsidy scheme would not be properly practicable in this province, the minister said.

"We will examine the whole thing thoroughly with a view to putting it into effect if it can be proved practicable," he said. "One cannot scoff at a sincere effort to deal with this problem, but as far as we can see this is not even a temporary solution in British Columbia. It may work in other provinces, where conditions are different."

Mr. Pearson explained that very few farmers in British Columbia were in a position to take any number of men, even on the basis of board with the governments paying the wages. There was the question of accommodation as well.

There were only two primary industries which could take men on a plan of this sort, lumber and metal-mining. Provincial records showed, however, that a small percentage of the unemployed single men were trained for work like this. Out of 15,000 single men on the rolls in March, about 1,600 were trained as lumbermen and 700 as miners. Since then most of these had probably been absorbed.

"This new proposal does not touch the transient problem at all, as far as I can see," he continued. "The Dominion government should accept the full responsibility for them. Until this class of unskilled labor, if it is a surplus that should be cleared out."

LORD WATSON GOT REVENGE

Anecdote of Famous British Jurist Related to Club

Three score Victoria lawyers went to luncheon with the Canadian Club at the Empress Hotel today to listen to Rt. Hon. Lord Thankerton, Lord of Appeal in Ordinary and distinguished British jurist, talk about the "higher aspects of the legal profession."

In this brief but eloquent address he did hear a forty minutes of excellent story telling, and humorous anecdotes in which were mentioned many of the notables of Great Britain. Lord Thankerton's address was entitled "The Love of the Law," but he barely mentioned the law, merely using his theme as the background for one story after another. He had anecdotes about Lord Michael Morris, the Irish jurist, the late Sir Redvers Buller, Lord Riddell and other famous names, along with homey stories of Scotland and one about his own famous father, Lord Watson, once described as "the strongest man on the strongest bench in the world."

The story about his father had to do with the time when he was appearing before the board of examiners and was posed an unusually difficult question. He could not give an answer, but he was not to be deterred. He asked the examiners to wait while he went to his room and returned with the answer.

Lord Thankerton left one bit of philosophy about law with his audience. "What does the law do?" he asked. "Does freedom mean license. No, it means law and order. It is the opportunity for carrying on one's trade or avocation and adequate protection for one's person and property. The more you are bound by your community law the greater will be the freedom of the individual. Many people don't realize how they are beholden to the law. But law is the basis of order to the prosperity of a country. It creates the stability and certainty which is essential for trade. During the recent troublous financial times we have seen how uncertainty can hinder us."

Touching upon his present trip through Canada, he said he had been impressed most by the wide spaces, not only of the country but in the minds of the men and women. He extended greetings to the legal profession and the Canadians generally from the bench and bar of Scotland, and "that other part of the island, England."

Herbert Anscomb, past president of the Canadian Club, presided, and besides introducing the speaker, also presented Sir Charles Malcolm Barclay-Harvey, an old friend of Lord Thankerton, who is visiting the city as well and was a guest of the club.

MAYOR DAVID LEEMING

My Boyhood Ambition

DRUGGIST OR ARCHITECT

"Had it not been for £100 article fees, I might have been a druggist or an architect in England today," said Mayor David Leeming of Victoria.

Those two callings had the greatest appeal for Mayor Leeming when he was a boy, but a desire to make his own way at an early age led him into other fields.

He has established a record for continuous service for a mayor in Victoria.

The hardest part of his work as mayor revolves around matters of civic finance and the first half of the year provides the majority of his civic worries as he and the council draw up the budget.

While his early ambitions failed of achievement, as far as a vocation is concerned, he is well pleased with the turn of events which led him to become the chief magistrate of Victoria.

Had he his life to live over again he doubts if anything would suit him better than to occupy his present post. He likes to meet the distinguished visitors with whom he comes in contact as mayor and he enjoys studying humanity from the broad cross section exposed to him in his present work.

"Don't speculate" is his advice to the public.

Span Is Moved In Quick Time

Goldstream Bridge Winched Aside in Two Hours This Morning

Traffic was held up for only one hour and fifty-two minutes as a crew of twelve men moved the Goldstream bridge its own width to make way for a new span on the Island Highway this morning.

Although the road was officially closed from 4 to 9 o'clock, an automobile was allowed to cross the bridge at 4:35 o'clock, and another followed, with the bridge in its new position at 6:27 o'clock.

The span was jacked and drawn by a derrick into its temporary resting-place.

A bad approach to the span will be eliminated when the new bridge is constructed.

Woman Says Man And Child Slain

Tells Provincial Police Strange Story of Deaths in Vancouver

Provincial police said today a woman who gave her name as Mrs. Anne Mothe of Ymir, B.C., was being kept under observation by authorities in Nelson after she had made a statement that two persons, whose deaths are officially listed as accidental and from natural causes, were slain.

The two persons whom police said were named in the statement were Morris Alf Mothe, three, who died in Vancouver General Hospital last year from sepsis, and John Anderson, a twenty-nine-year-old blacksmith of Vancouver, whose death in 1933 was attributed to thrombosis.

The statement attributed by police to Mrs. Mothe said the three-year-old boy was slain and that Anderson was poisoned.

Thomas Jarvis was elected president of Ward 2, which Liberal Association last night. He succeeds Robert Noble in that office. William Fletcher was chosen vice-president and Charles Doyle secretary. The executive committee is as follows: Messrs. Noble, Barker, Grey and Edmondson and Messdames Harris, Bell, Fletcher and Hourigan. Premier T. D. Pattullo was chosen honorary president and Norman W. Whitaker honorary vice-president.

CITY FINANCES ARE DISCUSSED

James Forman Tells of Past Extravagances; C. S. Henley Questioned

"There is a mortgage of $3,500 on every home in the country due to municipal, provincial and Dominion debts," declared James Forman, who addressed the Real Estate Board at its luncheon in Spencer's dining-room this afternoon on the city's financial condition.

Mr. Forman in his talk traced the history of the city. During the boom years of 1911 Victoria was a community of optimists. Much of the expenditures of that time were needed but the city went to extremes. All the work done during those years was paid by $7,000,000 or $8,000,000 worth of bonds.

These bonds which were on a ten-year plan were not paid back and today $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 were still being carried. Mr. Forman said. Now the city owed $13,000,000 worth of bonds, about $10,000,000 of which were in 4 and 4½ per cent issues. The latter would cost much to buy. The Henley plan and only about $3,000,000 worth of 5 and 6 per cent bonds would suffer to any great extent.

"The bondholders must see that this plan is better than going into bankruptcy," Mr. Forman said, "for bankruptcy a receiver will force refunding at a much lower rate of interest."

C. S. Henley, originator of the financial plan for the city, attended the luncheon and answered questions. "The actual saving in interest to the city in the first year under the plan is difficult to estimate," Mr. Henley said, "but I should think it would be about $160,000 because there are only a few hundred thousand dollars worth of bonds coming due."

"The reason for the necessity of dealing with this matter immediately is that there is a fall session of the Legislature. If we leave it till then, we will have to leave it till next year, and gentlemen, if we leave it to next year we won't have any money to meet the 1937 bonds," Mr. Henley said.

"If we default on one lot of bonds it means that all the bonds fall due and the city goes into bankruptcy," he added. "It is an unfortunate impression that the city has enough to meet its obligations till 1944. The city would have been able to take care of the maturing bonds if the bank had continued to loan it money, but the bank has called a halt."

HELEN JACOBS GAINS FINAL

Forest Hills, N.Y., Sept. 11—Helen Jacobs, Berkeley, Calif., vanquished Kay Stammers, England, 6-4, 6-3, and advanced to the finals of the United States tennis championships in her bid for her fifth straight title.

By her victory Miss Jacobs partly atoned for defeats suffered at the hands of Miss Stammers in the Wimbledon Cup competition last year and in England this year.

It also moved her into the final round against Alice Marble, San Francisco, an opponent who, on form, should be a tough contest. Miss Jacobs, making a comeback after a two-year retirement, due to illness, suffered during the 1934 French hard court championships, gained her final bracket earlier today at the expense of Helen Pedersen, Stamford, Conn., 6-1, 6-1.

Donald Budge, the chief American contender, defeated Frankie Parker, Springfield, N.J., 6-4, 6-3, 6-3, and gained the final round of the men's singles.

Hunt Season To Start Tomorrow

Sportsmen Anticipate Bright Prospects For Success With Deer; Pigeons Plentiful

With the hunting season opening tomorrow, sportsmen throughout the city are preparing for action.

Prospects for deer hunting seem particularly bright. Reports from Sooke to the effect that farmers have experienced difficulty in protecting their crops from the depredations of these animals are accompanied by news that deer are likewise plentiful in the Cowichan district.

For the third year Victoria and Island sportsmen will compete for the Sylvester U-Drive Trophy, which will be awarded to the hunter bringing down the largest buck deer on Vancouver Island. Any hunter on the island is eligible for the competition, but the deer must be weighed in at the Sylvester U-Drive, Douglas Street. Four other prizes are offered by the firm in connection with this competition.

The deer season lasts from September 12 to November 30, inclusive. The season for blue grouse begins tomorrow and terminates on October 15. The daily limit bag for blue grouse has been set at six per day per person, and a total of twenty-five for the season.

The season for hand-tailed pigeons begins tomorrow and ends on September 30. Hunters are allowed ten pigeons daily and a total of fifty for the season.

While hand-tailed pigeons are said to be fairly plentiful this season, the blue grouse are reported to be "none too plentiful."

Revised Plan For Civic Refunding Heard By Council

Alderman Ed Williams noted the proposed delegation had been reduced by one.

EXPENSE MONEY

Still referring to expenses, Mr. Henley said the $15,000 suggested for the mission to eastern Canada and Great Britain need not be spent entirely. "If it cost slightly more, he would care for it, he added. He had not received any compensation for the work he had already done, Mr. Henley remarked, saying his preliminary expenses had been considerable.

Alderman Dewar asked if the proposed delegation secured the consent of 51 per cent of the British bondholders to the refunding scheme, would the city ask the provincial government to make the other 49 per cent consent?

Alderman Hunter expressed the opinion that much more than 51 per cent would agree to the interest reduction.

Alderman Adam, chairman of the meeting, asked if any effort had been made to secure the consent of local holders of city bonds to the value of about $2,500,000.

Mr. Henley replied no effort along those lines had been made in Victoria. He said about $7,500,000 worth of Victoria bonds were held in Great Britain. If consent to the refunding were secured from them, he believed the government would give the city the same treatment it had accorded three other municipalities on the refunding question.

He explained the majority of bondholders in London were known to his agents and could be assembled for meetings. It would not be necessary, Mr. Henley continued, to go to Edinburgh and Liverpool, since his agents had informed him bondholders in those centres would be represented by special councils in London.

Regarding the Victoria bondholders' angle, Mr. Henley said he thought approaching city holders would defeat the object of the scheme which planned to approach the majority of the bondholders first.

MIGHT STRENGTHEN HAND
Alderman Williams and Alderman Adam voiced the opinions the approval of the Victoria bondholders for the scheme would strengthen the hand of the delegation.

Alderman Hunter again confirmed the bona fides of Mr. Henley's connections in Great Britain, the high standard of his agents and the high regard in which he was held by British firms he represented.

The practical advantage of approaching British bondholders, who would suffer less in interest reduction than would the majority of those in Canada and the United States, was noted by Alderman Oskell. He thought the city generally favored the refunding scheme.

He suggested the finance committee the value of bringing in a compromise arrangement which would reduce the city's debt to Great Britain, where he thought the work of persuasion would be easier, by still another member, making it a representation of two.

In reply to question by Alderman Willis, H. S. Pringle, city solicitor, voiced the opinion the new proposal was legally safe. D. A. Macdonald, city comptroller-treasurer, expressed his view the scheme was sound.

The council then passed the motion instructing the city solicitor to prepare a by-law naming Mr. Henley fiscal agent.

NEW PROPOSAL

The newly-drafted proposal, framed with a view to overcoming legal obstacles, follows:
"Pursuant to the powers conferred by Section 149 of the Municipal Act and all other powers vested in this Municipal Council of the Corporation of the City of Victoria by statute and by by-law, Resolved that there be issued from time to time in such amounts as the Comptroller-Treasurer

All such debentures to be callable at par, on three months' notice with interest up to date of expiration of such notice, and to be in the series and places of payment following, in such amounts as agreements for refunding and purchase may render necessary or expedient, that is to say:

"And that the Comptroller-Treasurer, Douglas A. Macdonald, of this Municipal Corporation, be and he is hereby authorized, empowered and directed to negotiate and enter into refunding purchase and exchange agreements for all or any of such debentures on the basis of par value of the said outstanding debentures and outstanding stock of this municipal corporation by way of refunding exchange and that every such agreement be as soon as practicable possible submitted to this Municipal Council for confirmation:

DELEGATES SUGGESTED

"And also, pursuant to every statutory and by-law power in this Municipal Corporation vested, that David Leeming, Douglas A. Macdonald and Charles S. Henley, as delegates be appointed by this Resolution of this Municipal Council to act for and on behalf of this Municipal Council in the municipal business of bringing about the sale or refunding exchange of all or every possible amount and part of the said debentures in the said Series A, B, C, D, and E, or in any one or more of the said Series as may be practicable from the date of this resolution until further or other resolution of this Municipal Council in this behalf, and that such delegates proceed to London, England, and to the said City of New York, and to such places in Canada as may be found expedient, the names and addresses of such delegates being as follows:

"3. Charles S. Henley of 1301 Rockland Avenue, Victoria, B.C.

EXPENSE MONEY ALLOCATION

"And moved and seconded by the above named Aldermen: That the sum of thirteen thousand dollars be entrusted to the said Comptroller-Treasurer to be used, paid out and disbursed by him in paying the expenses of delegates Douglas A. Macdonald and Charles S. Henley when traveling on and when engaged in the municipal business aforesaid, and in paying the costs and charges of agency assistance and legal fees in any city visited in the course of the municipal business aforesaid and the costs of rents, printing, stationery, postage and other properly incidental outgoings in connection with the municipal business aforesaid (not to exceed in the aggregate the said sum of thirteen thousand dollars) and to duty and fully account to this Municipal Council in the premises: and "To the said David Leeming there be entrusted the sum of two thousand dollars to be used in paying the expenses of the said David Leeming when traveling and engaged on the said municipal business subject to an account to the said Municipal Council and provided that the sum of two thousand dollars shall not be exceeded in disbursements by the said David Leeming.

VALIDATING LEGISLATION

"And moved and seconded by the same above named Aldermen, that as soon as reasonably and properly may be (after ascertaining the results or some of the results attained by the above named delegates in the municipal business above mentioned) a petition be presented to the Legislative Assembly and Legislature of British Columbia praying for the passing and enacting of a statute validating all and singular the above mentioned municipal business, and all things done in connection therewith as well by this Municipal Council as by each and every of said delegates acting in the course of the above mentioned municipal business and validating all the aforesaid debentures in Series A, B, C, D and E as above described and in the event of completion of a successful refunding up to an aggregate of not less than $12,656,222.21 to the satisfaction of the Municipal Council, empowering the Municipal Council to pay to the said Charles S. Henley out of funds of this Municipal Corporation the sum of fifteen thousand dollars in full for his services in connection with the above mentioned municipal business."

"Nation Terrorized" (Gerhart Seger). Herr Seger's book deals with his experiences during six months' incarceration in the Oranienburg concentration camp (Germany)—notoriously among the worst of German concentration camps—from which he finally escaped. His was the first authentic report from a fugitive from such a camp, and it now appears for the first time in an English translation. In simple but effective language Herr Seger, former Socialist deputy in the Reichstag, tells of what he saw and of what happened to him personally in this camp. His account of prison life there lacks the spectacular touches of "The Brown Book," but it has a sincere and honest ring.

"Heroes and Assassins" (Stoyan Christowe) is the story of Macedonia's fierce struggle for freedom and a place in the sun, written by one of her sons. Mr. Christowe describes forty years of Balkan turmoil, caused by the greed of the small powers that have snatched at Macedonian soil and the equal greed of the great powers that for purposes of their own have edged the small powers on. Mr. Christowe has written an exciting tale and one that is historically accurate.

"Australia's Government Bank" (Leslie Cyril Jauncey) is a comprehensive history of one of the most unusual institutions existing among banking concerns today. It commenced operations in 1912, relying solely upon an overdraft of £10,000 from the Commonwealth Treasury. Today its balance sheets total over £1,000,000,000 and it has accumulated large profits for the Australian people.

"B. U. F. Oswald Mosley and British Fascism" (James Drennan). Sir Oswald Mosley, one of the most provocative figures of English post-war politics, was the youngest minister since Pitt, and a great parliamentary future was anticipated for him, when he threw it up and set about building a Fascist movement in Britain. In this volume the author considers the personality of Mosley and his influence on the Labor and Fascist movements in this country, and he also gives an interesting study of Fascism as the modern European movement of the twentieth century.

"Admiral Togo" (Ronald V. C. Bodley). This biography of Admiral Togo deals not only with the career of Japan's greatest naval hero, but also with the emergence of Japan from a state of medieval obscurity, to the position of a first-class modern power. At the time of the birth of M. H. Togo in 1848, Japan was still a feudal country and virtually closed to all intercourse with the outer world. In this biography the author has produced not only a really accurate picture of the life of the great admiral, but also of the metamorphosis of Japan during the latter half of the nineteenth century.

"Voyage of the Tai-Mo-Shan" (Martyn Sherwood) is the narrative of a voyage made by five young naval officers in a small sailing ship which took them practically around the world. In the spring of 1932 five adventurous naval officers on the China station built themselves a small sailing ship in a yard at Hongkong with the intention of sailing her home to England. When the Tai-Mo-Shan was ready her crew took her across to Japan, and from there by way of the Aleutian Islands to Alaska. They then sailed down the coast of America to Panama, and through the canal into the Atlantic. There is real adventure in "The Voyage of the Tai-Mo-Shan," and it is a narrative of a fine achievement that is comforting to those who doubt whether there are many sailors left in the navy. The book is well illustrated by photographs taken during the trip.

"Wilderness of Zin" (Sir Charles Leonard Woolley and T. E. Lawrence). Written in 1914, this book is a record of the authors' explorations made early in that year, in the desert region south of Beersheba and the Dead Sea, reaching to Akaba. They joined Colonel S. P. Newcombe and his survey party to study the antiquities of the country and clear up some previous misconceptions concerning it. Their book has placed on a solid foundation the history and archaeology of that region, including much concerning the wanderings of the Israelites, the origin of the Nabataeans, and the reason for so many extensive Byzantine ruins in so wild a desert, as well as abolishing many incorrect theories which had hitherto been formed from very meagre data.

"Scottish Journey" (Edwin Muir). This is not only a travel book. In it Mr. Muir describes more the conditions of life in that country—work, trade conditions, politics and points of view. He shows that Scottish prosperity is wrapped up with England's, and points out the peril in which it lies today. Anyone interested in Britain's future prosperity will find in Mr. Muir's graphic report on the present and his bold plans for Scotland's future many points of interest.

Other recent titles in non-fiction are: "Away to Cape Breton" (Gordon Brinley), "Sex and a Changing Civilization" (K. M. MacFarlane), "Sane Sex Life and Sane Sex Living" (H. W. Long), "Future of Morals" (C. E. M. Joad), "What is Patriotism" (N. P. MacDonald), "Psychology and Religion" (David Forsyth), "Religion" (J. F. Hecker), "God in the Everyday" (Hugh Redwood) and "New Trends in Socialism" (G. E. G. Catlin).

REGISTRATION AT COLLEGE UP

Applications Total 110, With Five Days to Register

Registration to date at Victoria College for the term opening September 23 is slightly over the mark reached at this time last year, according to J. A. Cunningham, registrar.

With five more days to register, 110 students have applied for courses, many of them from places in the interior of the province.

"Students often prefer to take their first two years of college here because we have a comparatively small enrollment and can afford to give them more individual help," Prof. Cunningham said yesterday.

Only a few changes have been made in the curriculum. A course in the history of Canada is being offered which will alternate with a course in the history of Canada west of the Great Lakes in subsequent years. Trigonometry lectures will be given in the first term instead of the second, leaving algebra and analytical geometry in the first year course until the post-Christmas period.

A course in the mathematical theory of investments is being offered, dealing with the theory of interest, debentures, sinking funds, depreciation, probability, valuation of bonds and annuities, and the mathematical principles involved.

Tarzan And The Leopard Men

When Soblo uttered the dreadful name of the Taloned Death, Tarzan noted that a strange and ghastly horror, great into the faces of the villagers, Tarzan brightened. Now at last, perhaps, he could obtain some hint of the nature of this thing for which he was seeking.

"What is this Taloned Death?" he asked eagerly. Hardly had he spoken when his friend Orlando leaped forward and clapped a hand over his mouth, shaking his head in earnest warning. From a distance, the witch-doctor beheld the tableau and chuckled.

"Your friend does well to warn you," he hoarse, "for no man dare mention even the name of the Taloned Death, except those of us who deal with demon things. It is mightier than the mightiest of men. Even the most potent spirits are powerless against it!"

Tarzan saw a chance to encourage the people to help him track down this mysterious thing. He would reveal himself as their fearless champion. He called out boldly: "Go on now, Soblo, and conjure up this thing against me. I would do battle with the Taloned Death!"

After All, It's the Same Old World

Says Life Is Changed Only On The Surface

GEOGE GERSHWIN says that people have changed outwardly, but not inwardly, and that the same old songs about love and moons and Mother and home are still the ones that wow audiences and that sell a million copies.

No matter whether we sing it or croon it, our hearts still make the same old cry for love. No matter whether it is a lament or the blues, we all have the same old nostalgia for what we have missed in life. No matter how many Hot Mamas we play about with, the one woman is still Mother. And no matter how we jazz it up, there is still no place like home, sweet home to us.

As Talleyrand said long ago: "There are many civilizations, but only one human nature." And it is curious how little that changes through the years. The passions that have stirred our breasts since time immemorial still stir them. The things that our forefathers wanted, we still want. And the paths they trod in their search for happiness we must still walk if we find it.

This is a truth that it seems impossible to make the young generation believe. Because they fly through the air and ride in high-powered automobiles instead of traveling by foot or on oxen; because they can be shot up to the top of skyscrapers instead of having to toil up the steps; because they can read by electric lights instead of tallow candles or oil lamps; because they can have luxuries and comforts of which their forefathers never dreamed, they say that we are living in a new world in which everything is changed.

But they are mistaken. It is the same old world, with the same old laws of cause and effect working in the same old way, with the same rewards and punishments, with the same old games that must be played by the same old rules. Outwardly things may be changed, but inwardly they are just as they always were.

All of us have always wanted money and the things that money buys, but the youngsters of today are not willing to earn it by hard work and thrift as their elders did. Nothing is more common than to hear a boy say: "I'm not going to slave until I am middle-aged, denying myself everything in order to get together a little pile of dough, as my poor old Dad has done. I want money to spend while I am young and can enjoy it and I'm going to make a fortune quick so I can have some fun. Things are changed now."

But when he starts out to get rich quick or to become famous in an hour, he finds that success is just as hard to achieve as it ever was and that it has to be done in the same old patient, hard way. He finds that dissipation, lack of sleep, getting into debt and having his mind on good times instead of his work slow down his efficiency; that he who climbs the ladder must do it in exactly the same old way that every other man who has reached the top has done.

Because they can go out into the world and make their own living instead of being Mother's helper at home, and because they can wear pants on the street without being arrested by the police, girls are very certain that this is a changed world for women and that they can do whatever they please and not be held by any of the old taboos for their sex. So a lot of them run wild. They drink too much, smoke too much and indulge in liaisons, and think they are having a grand time until Nature and society come along and audit their accounts and remind them that they are still women and must pay for what they have got.

For dissipation still shatters women's bodies. The best people still look askance at the ladies who live in love nests. And love still kills and ride away when a woman's youth and beauty are gone, or a prettier flapper dawns on the scene.

Many young people believe that marriage has changed, that it is an until-you-get-tired arrangement instead of an until-death-us-do-part contract, and that a husband and wife should be called upon to give up their individual liberty, but should be free to philander around with other men and women after marriage just as they did before.

But they find that no matter how gay a cloak of liberality a marriage may wear on the outside, within it is just the same monopoly it always was, and that the husband and wife who indulge in extra marital affairs invariably come to the divorce court. They find that the happy marriage is built on the same foundations it always has been—of faith and love and loyalty and service, and of a man and woman loving each other so much that they are satisfied with each other. For life doesn't change. It is always the same.

Uncle Wiggily's Soda Fountain

BY HOWARD R. GARIE

"Attention, children!" squeaked the Lady Mouse-Teacher in the Hollow Stump School one Friday afternoon. "I want you all to pay close attention to what I am going to say."

"Oh, my goodness!" thought Baby Bunty, the orphan rabbit. "Some one has done something wrong this first week of school after vacation and Miss Mouse is going to scold us."

Some of the other animal boys and girls thought the same thing, especially Jackie Bow-wow, who had been pulling the tail of Betty, the raccoon girl. But Miss Mouse smiled and pleasantly said: "Don't worry, she wasn't going to be very cross."

"Now children," squeaked the animal teacher, "you have been away from school a week and I know it hasn't been easy, for you have been doing pretty much as you pleased during vacation. So, as a reward for having been good I am going to let you eat candy. There will be no school this afternoon."

"Hoorsay!" shouted all the animal pupils and they raced out of school so fast the old janitor rat thought there was a fire alarm and he began to sniff for smoke. But he smelled none and when Miss Mouse told him what she had done the janitor laughed.

PICNIC IN THE WOODS

Uncle Wiggily was surprised to see his rabbit children home so early from school. He also thought something had happened—that perhaps Miss Mouse had been too much cheese and couldn't hear the lesson. But when Sammie Littlefoot told what had happened Mr. Lonsdale said:

"Well, since you have no school, how would you like to come with me for a picnic in the woods?"

"Oh no, we wouldn't like that at all!" said Baby Bunty.

"Oh, no!" said all the others, and they all laughed for they were early faddies, you know.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily, twinkling his pink nose. "Well, very good. I'll get Nurse Jane to put up a basket of lunch and we'll have the picnic."

It was lovely in the woods and when the animal children thought of how there would be no school next day, which was Saturday, they were very happy. And when they looked at the lunch basket they owned it as they were sitting around a little sparkling fountain spring in the woods, they were most happy.

"Wouldn't it be wonderful?" said Baby Bunty, who was eating a lettuce and wish, "wouldn't it be wonderful if this was a soda water fountain, and the orphan rabbit pointed to the spring fountain which spouted clear, cold water and save it to Bunty."

"It's like real soda water!" exclaimed Bunty in delight.

"Can you make me some sassafras soda?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Perhaps I can make it," said Uncle Wiggily with a mysterious twinkle of his pink nose. "What flavor do you like, Bunty?"

"Bunch!" said the orphan rabbit.

Uncle Wiggily hoped over to a birch tree. He took off some of the bark, removed the juice from it with a sharp pointed stick, stirred in some sugar and save it to Bunty.
